Would have voted if decision in doubt

Osmon abstains on vote on interest conflict project

by JOE FRANZ

Buffalo Grove Village Trustee Edward Osmon, who was recently accused of a conflict of interest because he bid for a contract on a project being considered by the village board, abstained from voting on the matter Monday night.

The conflict of interest question arose when it was revealed that Osmon, a heating contractor, had bid for the heating work on local real estate broker Stan Lieberman's proposed office-specialty shop center, a project that was being considered by the village board.

The village board Monday night, without Osmon's vote, approved Lieberman's project by a 5-0 margin. The proposed center is on the north side of Dundee Road, west of Golfview Terrace.

Michael Kearns, 354 Dundee Pkwy., one of eight homeowners who opposed Lieberman's center, told Osmon at the Aug. 6 village board meeting that he should abstain from voting on the matter because he submitted a bid and could possibly benefit financially if the project was approved. Osmon, at the time, refused and cast a vote to tentatively approve the center.

OSMON'S DECISION to abstain came Monday night after Village Atty. Richard Raysa announced his legal opinion on the matter. "I would say it certainly is a violation of the spirit of the law if not the letter of the law for you to vote on this project," Raysa said.

Following the meeting Osmon said the only reason he abstained was because the village board decision was not close, and his vote would not have made any difference. "If it had been a borderline case, I would have voted for it," he said. "I figure why cause problems if it wouldn't affect the outcome."

Darry Gross, deputy chief of the Civil Division of the Cook County State's attorneys office, told The Herald about two weeks ago Osmon's involvement, in his opinion, constituted a conflict of interest. He said he thought it would be unwise for Osmon to vote on the matter.

Gross said the matter fell under a legal "gray area" and was not sure Osmon was in violation of state statutes regarding the conduct of public officials. "I would say on the surface it's a trouble area, but I doubt it's an indictable offense," he said.

"I think that's the key. If it's not indictable, it's not a conflict of interest," Osmon said last Friday.

GROSS EXPLAINED that state statutes on what constitutes official misconduct of public officials are vague and open to interpretation. He said there have been few court cases on such matters, thus making it difficult to make a decision.

Probably the only way Osmon would be in direct violation of state law would be if it could be proven that he was awarded a contract even though his bid was higher than some others submitted, Gross said.

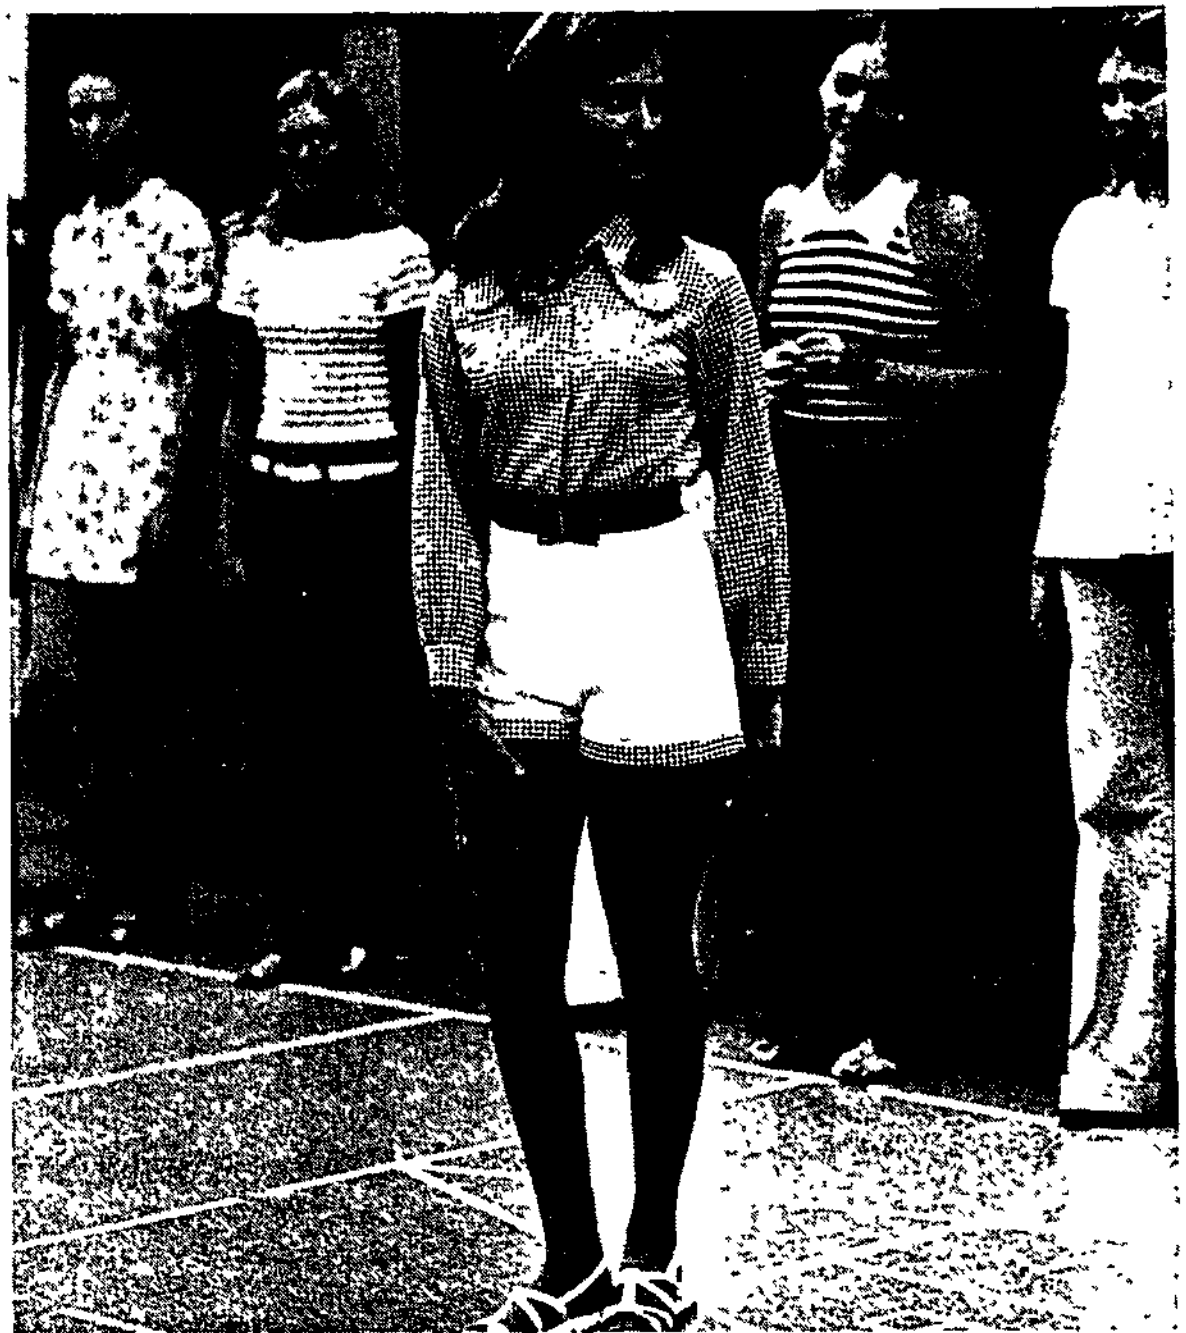

Osmon said last Friday since he has been a trustee, he has bid on other projects that have been before the village board. Although he has bid on the projects he has not been awarded any contracts, he said.

OSMON SAID ALL of his bids have been submitted after the village board made a decision on the projects. Osmon's bid on Lieberman's project was for the first phase of the project which was approved by the village board several months ago. The village board Monday night approved annexation and a zoning change for an adjacent piece of property which will allow Lieberman to expand the project.

Osmon said Monday to his knowledge no contracts have been awarded for the heating work on Lieberman's project.

During his election campaign, slightly more than two years ago, Osmon said he was advised by the Illinois attorney general's office that he could bid on projects in the village as long as the bids were not for village contracts. Law prohibits trustees from doing work in the village that will benefit them.

Since Osmon was elected he has gone into business for himself. As of April 1, he has been the owner of Grove Engineering which he operates out of his home at 406 Buffalo Grove Rd. Prior to that he worked for two other private heating contractors.

THERE ARE MANY things for any aspiring beauty queen to learn, as contestants in the upcoming Miss Buffalo Grove pageant are finding out. Here, Cora Rita Jones, Miss Buffalo Grove of 1972, demonstrates the proper way to walk on stage. Twelve contestants, from Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Arlington Heights, and Long Grove are entered in the pageant, scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in the Cooper Junior High School auditorium.

'Miss Buffalo Grove' title goal of 12 girls Saturday

A potential Miss America will be crowned Saturday night at the third annual Miss Buffalo Grove Pageant.

Twelve contestants from the Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Arlington Heights and Long Grove areas, will compete in the pageant, at 8 p.m. in the Cooper Junior High School auditorium.

The girls were announced as contestants last month and have been rehearsing for the pageant since then. The girl selected as Miss Buffalo Grove of 1973 will go on to compete in the Miss Illinois Pageant. Miss Illinois will then compete in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, N. J.

The Buffalo Grove Jaycees are sponsoring the pageant. According to Sharon Cuculic, one of the pageant organizers, this year's pageant theme will be "When you Wish Upon A Star."

The twelve contestants are Melinda Bala, 19, of 1112 Harvard Ln., Buffalo Grove; Jackie Blaise, 18, of 932 Valley Stream Dr., Wheeling; Katherine Buerger, 20, of 712 N. Green Dr., Wheeling; Anne Butler, 18, Rte. 2, Box 350 Long Grove; Karen Funk, 18, of 862 Thornton Ln., Buffalo Grove; also Debra Gaynor, 18, of 3242 N. Volz Dr., Arlington Heights; Pamela Hauber, 18, of 291 Lincoln Terr., Buffalo Grove; Paige McCabe, 18, of 49 Cedar Ln., Wheeling; Peggy Prokoff, 17, of 590 Hickory Ln., Buffalo Grove; Theresa Schneller, of 108

E. Center, Wheeling; Patricia Strong, 17, of 14 E. Hintz Rd., Arlington Heights and Debra Zawacki, 18, of 1023 Whitehall Dr., Buffalo Grove.

THE PAGEANT will be conducted along the lines of the national Miss America Pageant. Mrs. Cuculic said. Girls will participate in swimsuit, evening gown and talent competitions. In addition, the girls will present a song and dance number to open the pageant.

After the presentation of the Miss Congeniality award, voted on by the contestants, the winner and two runners-up will be selected.

Girls also will be required to answer an interview-type question during the pageant, and will have personal interviews with the judges Saturday afternoon. Judges for the pageant are being supplied by the national Miss America organization.

Cora Rita Jones, Miss Buffalo Grove of 1972, and Lynn Kolman, Miss Buffalo Grove of 1971 also will participate in the pageant.

Pageant tickets are available at the Bank of Buffalo Grove, at Rose-Lynn Flooring in the Ranchmart Shopping Center, and at Foremost Liquors in the Buffalo Grove mall. They cost $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Come from throughout state for funeral

Police to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhineland, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DUBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

Bake sale Sunday at St. Mary's Church

There will be a bake sale Sunday at St. Mary's Church sponsored by the primary grade pupils' mothers.

The sale will be open in the school hall after 9 a.m.

Homemade cakes, breads, brownies and specialties will be among the goodies available.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to purchase filmstrips and other audio-visual equipment for the children.

The Library Guild will also be selling gym shorts and shirts at the bake sale.

Trustees defer Phoenix rezoning

Discussion of a request by the Phoenix Construction Co. for rezoning of four tracts, three of them fronting on the Buffalo Grove Golf Course, has been deferred while the village board of trustees further investigates the proposal.

Phoenix Monday night requested the village board rezone the property for single-family to multi-family use.

Phoenix has an option to buy the property but will do so only if the village changes the zoning to allow construction of townhouses, apartments and condominiums.

If the zoning is changed, the owner of the golf course has agreed to sell the course to the village. Some village officials have expressed a desire to acquire the golf course and preserve it as open space. Some members of the village board who fear the course will be sold to a developer have said they will consider rezoning the land around it if the village is given the opportunity to purchase it.

THE VILLAGE BOARD has been negotiating with Harold Friedman and the other owners of the golf course in an attempt to arrive at a satisfactory price.

Ownership of the land Phoenix proposes to buy is in a secret land trust. Jack Siegel, an attorney for Phoenix, said Monday he thinks Harold Friedman is the beneficiary of the trust.

If that is the case, that would explain why the sale of the golf course to the village by Friedman and his associates is contingent on the village granting a zoning change so that Phoenix will purchase the property around the course.

Several residents are opposed to the village changing the zoning of the property. They have said they would prefer the land be developed into single-family homes. Siegel, however, said the price Phoenix is being asked to pay is too expensive to make single-family development feasible.

ALTHOUGH VILLAGE zoning maps show the property as single-family, there is some question about the actual zoning. Village Atty. Richard Raysa said the village in the pre-annexation agreement which was approved in 1964 agreed to change the zoning of the property to multi-family. Through an oversight, however, an ordinance changing the zoning was never passed.

Raysa said the recent court decision in another village, concerning zoning of a piece of property, held that even though the proper ordinances were never passed, the village was obligated to give the developer the zoning that was promised in the pre-annexation agreement.

If the village board allows construction of the multi-family housing the village will also be given a 4.8-acre site across from the village hall. The site is being considered as a possible location for a public works garage. The land would be accepted in lieu of a $55,000 debt Friedman has owed the village for about four years. The land, which is estimated to be worth $96,000 is also in trust.

SIEGEL SAID IF the village for some reason does not purchase the golf course and accept the 4.8 acres, Phoenix will abide by the village resolution which requires developers to make cash or land donations to the school and park districts.

Phoenix has already agreed to donate about $36,000 to the school district. However, under the resolution the developer would be required to donate about $216,000 to the school district, officials said.

Siegel said if the village buys the golf course and is given the 4.8 acres, it would be unreasonable to expect other donations. "Our project is based on the assumption the village is going to buy the golf course," Siegel said. "If the village doesn't buy it, we will abide by the village's resolution."

Phoenix plans to develop 12.1 acres at the northwest corner of the golf course at Checker Road, 35.6 acres at the southwest corner on Lake Cook Road and 15.7 acres bordering the east end of the golf course. The developer also plans to develop 33.3 acres north of Ill. Rte. 83 at Busch Road. The golf course property will be developed into 913 units while the other tract will be developed into 240 units.

FATHER DONALD J. Duffy, pastor of St. Mary's Church, objected to the proposed development Monday night. He said he opposes the project because of its high density. "People have come to Buffalo Grove to get away from high density areas," he said.

Father Duffy called the proposed development, "John Hancock West", because of its three and four-story buildings. He said the tall buildings will overshadow the steeple of the church. "I think if we put up John Hancock West we might as well tear down the steeple," he said.

Some residents have also objected to the development because the tall structures will block the view of the golf course.

The proposed development will be considered again by the village board on Sept. 4.

And the (heart) beat goes on

by JOANN Van Wye

One thousand one, 1,002, 1,003 . . . the people counted as they compressed the patient's heart and at well timed intervals administered mouth-to-mouth ventilation.

The setting wasn't the emergency room of a hospital, the scene of an accident or the room of a heart attack victim, although it could have been. Instead it was the auditorium of Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights where approximately 40 persons had just completed a two-hour class on emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Bent over mannequins, the students practiced the resuscitation techniques they had just learned. Larry Johnson, a respiratory therapist at the hospital and class instructor, supervised the practice session and corrected techniques of the students.

This time the patient was a mannequin but this didn't deter the students who realized this was probably the last practice session most of them would have before they would be in a situation where a person's life might hinge on their ability to administer proper emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Attendance at the class was varied and ranged from teen-agers to senior citizens and included nurses, firemen and housewives. All with various degrees of medical background.

SINCE THE classes started last month more than 100 individuals have been trained in emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation techniques. Northwest Community Hospital offers the class, free of charge, on the first and third Monday of every month at 7:30 p.m. in the hospital auditorium.

The class starts with a 55-minute film entitled, "Prescription for Life" by the American Heart Association. The film, which is geared to individuals in the medical field and gets highly technical at some points, serves as an introduction to the class.

After the movie, Johnson goes over the ABC's of emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation with the class, using a mannequin to demonstrate. He also answers questions.

The A, opening an airway, and B, restoring breathing, were no problem for the students but the C, restoring circulation, left many of the students a little frightened and uncertain if the patient wouldn't be better off if they just stuck to mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and called for help.

JOHNSON DIDN'T deny that C, which calls for compression on the sternum at a rate of once per second, could result in breaking the sternum, breaking a rib, puncturing a lung or causing some other kind of internal damage, but added the would probably be death.

kind of internal damage, but added the consequences of not administering C would probably be death.

In addition to learning emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation, the class learned signs of impending cardiac arrest, signs of cardiac arrest, the five general types of cardiac arrest, and different techniques to be used on children and drowning victims.

As the students took their turn with the mannequins many vowed to come back for another class to have what they had learned reinforced before they might have to use it.

Urges some hospitals be closed

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dr. Peter Rogatz, senior vice president of Blue Cross, says extra hospital beds, and in some cases whole hospitals, should be closed where they are not needed.

Rogatz, in a keynote speech to the American Health Congress, said in some parts of the country there was an oversupply of hospital beds.

He urged health officials to abandon the assumption that high occupancy rates mean more beds are needed. Doctors, he said, tend to order patients to hospitals when there is a surplus of beds, thereby escalating health costs.

"As new ambulatory alternatives become available, we must take a carefully determined number of beds out of service," he said.

Rogatz said it might be possible to close down entire hospitals, "moth-balling" them for use when needs arise.

Newsprint shortage forces move

Paddock trims publishing schedule

A worsening shortage of newsprint forced Paddock Publications today to temporarily suspend publication of The Suburbanite, its weekend product distributed to 82,000 area households.

The suspension is effective with the edition for Sunday, Aug. 26.

In addition, the firm's daily Herald will not publish on Labor Day, Sept. 3.

"These steps are among emergency measures we have been forced to take in an effort to conserve our dwindling supply of newsprint," said Stuart R. Paddock Jr., president of Paddock Publications and its parent firm, The Paddock Corp.

IN ADDITION TO the daily Herald and The Suburbanite, the corporation publishes seven weekly newspapers in Lake County through another subsidiary company, Paddock Circle Newspapers Inc.

The Herald last week was forced to cutback on deliveries to newsstands, resulting in short supplies at many Northwest suburban locations.

Paddock said this short newsstand supply would continue for the duration of the current emergency because "our first priority must be to our home delivery customers."

If the shortage continues to worsen, he said the company will be forced to take additional emergency steps. "But every effort is being made to maintain daily Herald service to readers and advertisers, and we ask for their continued understanding and cooperation," added Paddock.

Suspension of The Suburbanite will be temporary and reviewed on a week-by-week basis, according to Charles E. Hayes, editor and publisher of Paddock Publications. He said the Herald will continue to publish its regular five-day schedule with Labor Day the only planned interruption.

U. S. NEWSPRINT supplies have been choked off by continued strikes at several Canadian paper mills with prospects likely for additional mills to go on strike later this week or next.

Unfortunately, the strikes come at a time when worldwide demand for newsprint is straining available supply, and there isn't the capacity in the paper industry to take up the slack.

Further aggravating the situation is a series of strikes on Canada's major railroads which have disrupted paper shipments from Canadian plants still operating.

A spokesman for one of the struck firms, Canadian International Paper Co., said Tuesday the current shortage was "extremely serious and unprecedented." Not even during World War II, he said, was the newsprint situation so severe.

American newspapers must depend upon Canadian sources for two-thirds of their newsprint supply. It is impossible for U. S. mills to meet this demand, and the result is a growing concern for the ability of some newspapers to continue publishing.

The short supply particularly affects small and medium-sized newspapers that are not owned by large groups which have the ability to shift around newsprint reserves from paper to paper as needed.

The shortage was especially acute in Eastern and Midwestern states with many newspapers forced to trim pages, reduce editions, cutback circulation and take other emergency measures in an effort to conserve rapidly diminishing inventories.

NEWSPRINT INDUSTRY officials in Montreal say a major factor in prolonging negotiations with the United Paperworkers International Union has been Canada's soaring cost of living, which tends to push up union demands faster than the bargaining process can operate. Management spokesmen have described the union demands as "unreasonable and unrealistic."

The current strikes in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick have closed the mills of Canadian International Paper Co., Price Bros. and Ontario Minnesota Co. A strike vote was to be taken this week by employees of another major producer, Abitibi Paper Co.

The Herald receives its total newsprint supply from Canadian International Paper Co. headquartered in Montreal.

Beer hike? So drink more, enjoy it less

Despite the nickel a six-pack price increase predicted for some brands of beer, Northwest Suburban distributors confidently say there'll be no letup in demand until the weather cools off.

And the rumors of supply shortages going around this week, "are just that," said the spokesman for an Elk Grove Village beer distributor. "When a brewery runs cans, it's all cans, and then all bottles. So there could be a temporary shortage of one or the other," he said Tuesday. "But nothing that vital." The company distributes Pabst and other brands.

"Costs are going up," the distributor added. "There's an increase in labor, and in operations. The driver's salary has gone up, and for the warehouseman and the freight handler." The price for beer may be going up 7½ cents a six pack, but the retailer may only increase his price a nickel a pack, he continued.

"Sales are up in the neighborhood of 5 per cent this year," the distributor said. "During the summer months you sell the most, until October. Then it starts cooling down and people start drinking liquor. By the holidays, most people are drinking booze."

WAYNE KRUSE, a Wheeling distributor of Schlitz and Old Milwaukee beers, said he is experiencing a healthy sales increase this summer. The average increase is 5 to 10 per cent a year.

"That's normal growth for the Northwest Suburbs," Kruse said. The only shortages are minor problems in the shipping department, he added.

"We've had two labor contracts increases, but we haven't had any price increases," said Kruse. Customers can buy a six pack of beer on sale at 99 cents or they can spend $1.45, he added.

At the Town and Country distributors in Elk Grove Village, a spokeswoman said she had heard rumors of a beer shortage in the Chicago area. "It's just hearsay," she said.

No notification of price increases has been received by the Town and Country, the local distributor for Meister Brau and Miller beers. The firm supplies area taverns, hotels and liquor stores.

Cost-conscious beer drinkers can save money on either the no return bottles of Miller beer or the cans of Meister Brau beer. Sales are the greatest during the summer months until the Labor Day. Then it slows down, the spokeswoman said.

Ticket takers needed to work at fair

Booster clubs and teacher-parent groups in High School Dist. 214 are still looking for volunteers to work as ticket takers at the Futuro of America Fair which begins Friday.

(Persons willing to work a six-hour shift on one or more days at the fair will earn money for the high school booster clubs and will also get free parking and a free admission ticket for each day worked.)

Interested volunteers may call William Warner, 259-5300.

Factory gutted by $1.1 million fire

A series of small explosions apparently triggered an extra alarm fire which raged out of control and gutted a Chicago machine tool plant Tuesday, causing an estimated $1.1 million damage and injuring four persons. Some 250 firemen battled the fire at the MacDell Corp., 230 N. Morgan St., and an adjacent plant which also was damaged.

State moves to curb cattle thefts

The governor, federal and state law offices met in Taylorville Tuesday for a conference on cattle rustling in hopes of coordinating efforts to deal with the "very severe problem." Cattle rustling — at its worst in Illinois history with 1973 losses projected at $352,000 — has increased with advent of the beef shortage. Authorities are looking into the possibility of mandatory branding regulations, aerial surveillance and deploying state police in critical areas.

Governor signs firearms bills

Gov. Daniel Walker Tuesday signed a series of law enforcement-related bills which prevent sale of "Saturday night special" handguns, requires court clerks to send notices of felony convictions to the state department which issues firearms owner registration cards, and increases penalties for second and subsequent convictions for carrying a concealed firearm.

Chicago policeman shot by youths

Two youths shot and slightly wounded Chicago policeman John J. Minich, 25, on the Southside Tuesday, triggering a search which included 50 officers, a canine unit and a police helicopter. Ten suspects were taken into custody.

Latins charge harassment by INS

The American Civil Liberties Union Tuesday filed a class action suit in U. S. District Court charging the Immigration and Naturalization Service with civil rights violations involving Chicago's Spanish speaking community. The suit accused INS agents of repeated harassment and unlawful arrests.

Chile rocked by riots, massive strikes

Rival political organizations battled with pistols, slingshots, fists and rocks outside Congress in Santiago, Chile, Tuesday during a series of strikes that paralyzed most of the nation. In the biggest wave of labor unrest in 10 months, tens of thousands of laborers struck throughout Chile in a massive protest against President Salvador Allende's government. Allende said the nationwide strikes were "unjustified and prejudiced the country."

Brenda unleashes wrath on coastal towns

Hurricane Brenda hit Mexico's southeast coast with 112-mph winds Tuesday, killing at least two people, flooding coastal towns and trapping 25 crewmen aboard a crippled Greek freighter in the Bay of Campeche. The storm center ripped ashore shortly before 9 a.m. about 30 miles west of Carmen, a coastal city of 100,000 in the state of Tabasco. Moving on a south-southwest course at 10-mph later in the day, Brenda was weakening rapidly as it moved into the mountains of southeastern Mexico.

Chrysler is auto strike target

The United Auto Workers picked Chrysler Corp. Tuesday as the member of the automotive "Big Three" that must come to terms on a new contract or face a strike. The current contract covering 120,500 workers at Chrysler expires Sept. 14. If no pattern-setting agreement is reached by then, Chrysler — which has not been shut by a national strike since 1950 — will be closed while Ford and General Motors continue building new cars.

Teamsters repudiated grape contracts

Teamster President Frank E. Fitzsimmons Tuesday repudiated contracts his field agents negotiated with 30 California grape growers during Teamster peace talks with Cesar Chavez of the United Farm Workers. AFL-CIO officials said the action opens the way to resume talks for restoration to the UFW of all contracts the Teamsters have taken away.

Astronauts discover sun 'bubble'

The Skylab 2 astronauts yesterday discovered a huge bubble in the upper atmosphere of the sun which scientists describes as the "most significant solar event since launch." The pilots' busy schedule also included another test of a one-man flying machine inside their workshop and photography of earth features that can be studied better from orbit than the ground.

Stocks tumble to 20-month low

Investor disinterest, intensified by the latest round of prime lending rate increases, sent stocks tumbling — and the Dow Industrial average to a new 20-month low — in light trading yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow slid to 857.84 and the average price of a NYSE common share dropped 28 cents. Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved broadly lower in sluggish trading.

Agnew charges deliberate 'leaks'; Richardson defends Justice Dept.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reasserting his innocence of wrongdoing, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew accused Attorney General Elliott L. Richardson and U.S. Attorney George Beall Tuesday of permitting underlings to mount an "outrageous" campaign to influence the grand jury investigating him.

At an eight-minute appearance before reporters and television cameras, with no questions permitted, Agnew charged the Justice Department was guilty of news leaks putting him in an unfavorable light. He also said Beall, the chief prosecutor in Baltimore, had shown he was not interested in hearing both sides of the story.

As he did at a news conference nearly two weeks ago, the vice president asserted he would not resign, and that he had nothing to hide. He expressed hope Beall would meet with him and that Richardson would move to choke off the news leaks.

Richardson responded immediately, saying he shared Agnew's concern about unfair and inaccurate publicity surrounding the investigation of the vice-president's participation in an alleged Maryland political kickback scheme. But the fault, said Richardson, does not lie with the Justice Department.

Richardson said that an informal investigation he conducted of possible leaks to the news media from the department on the Agnew matter led him to "stand by my previous statements that every reasonable step is being taken to assure that the Justice Department has not been and will not be the source of any such publicity."

"By observing a restraint on what they report, the media themselves can help to assure fairness, I would point out, moreover, that we do not now have any firm bases for the assumption that the information which has appeared in the press has come from law enforcement officials."

"In any case, any plausible lead implicating the Department of Justice will be pursued vigorously and appropriate disciplinary action will be taken against any department employee found to be responsible."

In Baltimore, Beall denied there had been any leaks from his office, and said he simply had made no decision on whether and how to respond to Agnew's offer last week to submit to a personal interview with federal prosecutors.

Agnew's public statement was prompted by an article in Time magazine quoting unnamed Justice Department officials as saying the grand jury has "no choice" but to indict Agnew on charges of receiving kickbacks from consulting engineers doing business with Maryland while he was governor in 1967-68.

The vice president said: "I can only assume from this account that some Justice Department officials have decided to indict me in the press whether or not the evidence supports their position. This is a clear and outrageous effort to influence the outcome of possible grand jury deliberations."

Richardson refused to answer news-men questions, but department spokesman John W. Hushen said that Agnew's complaint to Richardson, which the vice president discussed in his earlier news conference, was made to the attorney general in a letter hand delivered to the Justice Department before Agnew went on television.

Agnew's attack on officials in the same administration in which he serves was unusual. It strengthened speculation that he privately viewed himself as the victim of an internal political vendetta.

There were these other developments:

—In Baltimore, Beall suggested the White House might make a final decision on whether the grand jury in Baltimore would be asked to return an indictment against Agnew.

—In San Clemente, Calif., while Agnew was speaking, a presidential spokesman said it was "totally false" to assume that Agnew might be asked to resign.

—In Annapolis, Md., an Anne Arundel county grand jury returned more indictments in connection with allegedly fraudulent financial reports about a 1972 fund-raising dinner honoring Agnew. Officials refused to name those indicted.

—In Washington, a McGraw-Hill publication, Construction Weekly, said Agnew's name was being mentioned in connection with a now-dormant investigation into reports that an indictment was squelched against a Maryland contractor accused of trying to pay off some members of Congress in connection with the construction of a parking garage for the House of Representatives.

White House: Nixon's under pressure, but mood 'good'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — A White House spokesman conceded for the first time Tuesday that President Nixon has been under extraordinary pressure during the past several months but described his mood as "good" and said he was determined to get on with the business of the government.

"There is no question that these past few months have been periods of pressure on the President," said Gerald L. Warren, deputy White House press secretary.

"There is no question in the President's mind, in the minds of those around the President that he is not only capable of performing the duties of his office but that he is doing this," Warren continued.

Warren made the remarks in response to questions by newsmen who detected unusual tenseness and frustration in the President during his visit to New Orleans Monday.

Reports of an assassination plot forced Nixon to cancel a motorcade and forgo what aides predicted would be a favorable reception before Nixon's first public appearance in six weeks.

In his 30-minute speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention, Nixon's delivery appeared somewhat erratic and in an uncharacteristic outburst of temper he whirled and shoved his news secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, toward a group of newsmen who were following as the President entered Convention Hall.

Nixon got more bad news from pollsters Tuesday, as the latest Harris poll — measuring public reaction to Nixon's Watergate speech last week — found only 25 per cent convinced, and 65 per cent unconvinced by the president's account of his role in the bugging scandal.

N. M. hunt continues for Nixon threatener

TAOS, N.M. (UPI) — Law officers found empty rifle shell casings and a campsite possible left by an ex-policeman sought on a charge of threatening to kill President Nixon.

A state policeman said the shell casings and the campsite were found within a five-mile range of the "Morning Star" commune, indicating the suspect, Edwin Michael Gaudet, was near in the rugged mountains of northern New Mexico.

Gaudet, 30, broke away from Secret Service agents who went to the commune Monday night to arrest him on a warrant issued last Wednesday in New Orleans. Gaudet fled from the officers, grabbed a high powered rifle and exchanged several shots with officers before disappearing into the mountains.

Meantime, the Secret Service continued its investigation of a possible conspiracy to kill Nixon during his New Orleans visit — a case said to involve four still unidentified men.

Prices ease—not for long

(From Herald news services)

Consumers won a modest victory in the fight against inflation last month, when the cost of living rose by its smallest monthly margin in nine months, but another upward spiral in retail prices seemed certain to wipe it out in the weeks ahead.

The Labor Department reported Tuesday its Consumer Price Index (CPI) advanced by only 0.2 per cent in July, largely because of the dampening effects of the 60-day price freeze which ended Aug. 12.

There was even better news in the Chicago area, where average consumer prices actually dropped 0.2 per cent for the month, the first dip since January, 1972. Food was up by 0.4 per cent, but the increase was offset by decreases elsewhere, especially in housing down 0.5 per cent.

But despite the slight overall decrease locally, the price index was still 5.6 per cent higher than a year ago, with only beef and gasoline prices still frozen, retail prices throughout the nation were expected to resume their rapid climb in late summer and fall.

Under the Phase IV system of wage-price controls that replaced the freeze last week, "there has been a substantial surge of prices, especially of foods," said Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers.

In July, however, the dramatic increase in retail food prices nationally slowed down to a rise of 0.8 per cent, compared to increases ranging from 1 per cent to 2.6 per cent each month since January.

Although July was an improvement over recent months, last month's increase in food prices was still big by historical standards, and it was unclear how such a boost could have occurred during a price freeze.

Widespread violations of the freeze by grocery chains was one possible explanation, but Stein said the question "has not yet been fully explained."

Consumer prices now have risen nearly 6 per cent from a year ago, and the CPI stands at 132.7 based on a 1967 average of 100. This means shoppers had to pay $13.27 last month for the same goods and services that cost $10 six years ago.

BATTLING THE WORST siege of forest and brush fires ever in the west, firefighters issued a call for volunteers and listed a toll of 180,000 burned acres with damage estimated at $65 million. Five states are seriously affected, with little relief in sight.

Volunteers sought as fire toll mounts

by United Press International

Forest fires spread rapidly Tuesday over 180,000 acres in the west's "worst fire season ever." Belegued firefighters issued a nationwide call for 600 more men.

"It looks like the whole world's burning up," radioed the pilot of a small reconnaissance plane which led an armada of World War II vintage bombers in a chemical retardant attack on a raging blaze in California's El Dorado National Forest in the Sierra near Lake Tahoe.

Six crews from Alaska and 40 men from Pennsylvania were among those who flew to join 10,000 men fighting brush and timber fires in California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Some of the reinforcements headed for the deepest river gorge in the United States — Hell's Canyon on the Oregon-Idaho border — where 20 miles an hour winds fanned flames toward the lowest spot in the 5,500-foot deep gorge.

The call for more men came from the Interagency Fire Center at Boise, Idaho, which coordinated firefighting efforts in the Pacific Northwest and northern California.

In Montana, all national, state and private forest lands except for Glacier National Park were officially closed to visitors.

Six major fires burned out of control in Montana, forcing fire officials to ignore smaller blazes — including some as large as 300 acres — which didn't endanger lives or personal property. Crews concentrated on the 7-W Ranch and Dove Creek fires, which had burned 33,000 acres in rough terrain near Fort Peck Reservoir.

Cattlemen worked with firefighters in California's Lassen County to save 200 head of cattle threatened by a 20,000-acre brush fire.

The fires in the five states, which have caused more than $65 million in damage, were described as the worst outbreak in years.

John Hafterson, head of the Boise center's intelligence unit, said most Northwest fire managers believe it is "the worst fire season ever" because of a lack of moisture and low snowpack last winter.

SCHEDULING CLASSES for the fall semester at Harper College is going to keep students busy in the next few weeks. Registration for the fall semester begins Aug. 29 for part-time students and Sept. 6 for full-time students.

Harper signups begin next week for part-timers

Registration for the fall semester at Harper College in Palatine begins Aug. 29 for part-time students and Sept. 6 for full-time students.

Part-time students can register by telephone Aug. 29 to 30 between 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. by calling 397-1100. New students who have received a letter of acceptance from the college may also register by telephone.

Fulltime students may register for classes between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. and part-time students between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. on Sept. 6 and 7. Open registration, for students who are unable to register earlier, will be held on Sept. 8 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Students are assigned a registration time according to the first letter of their last name. A registration time schedule included in the fall course schedule was mailed to households in the district this month.

STUDENTS ENTERING the college full time must submit scores from one of four tests, the American College Test, Scholastic Aptitude Test, Career Planning Profile or the Comparative Guidance and Placement Test. They must also submit a transcript of all high school work and any college credits earned along with a personal medical history form and physical examination by a physician.

Both full-and part-time new students pay a nonrefundable $10 application fee.

Tuition per semester hour is $11 for residents of the Harper district. Other Illinois residents must pay $37.81 per semester hour, and out-of-state residents must pay $51.33 per semester hour.

Prospective students who live in Illinois outside the Harper district should contact their high school or junior college for tuition reimbursement.

FM Antennas

FM radio is a source for excellent programs, and many folks ask a Landwehr's Home Appliances about better reception.

FM signals weaken rapidly with distance. And this signal is very susceptible to interference as the distance increases. FM built-in antennas are all right if you're on a straight line from the transmitter, but any reflections create hum and garbled sounds from time to time.

You can connect to your TV antenna with a signal splitter and generally improve it. However, the best is a separate directional FM roof antenna designed specifically for these signals.

Teacher aide program offered at Harper

Harper College is cooperating with Palatine School Dist. 15 and Wheeling School Dist. 21 to offer a teacher aide certificate program beginning in September.

Students should contact either Paul Jung, director of personnel at Dist. 15, or Marjorie Beu, assistant superintendent of instruction at Dist. 21, to enroll in the program.

Students will work with individual pupils or groups of students in the schools as teaching assistants. Elective courses may be taken at Harper College during the day or evenings but can be waived if the student has already acquired six hours of college credits.

Nickel a quart hike?

Moo-ve over beef—
milk's going up

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Lier, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Lier predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Lier attributed the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Lier put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Lier said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

Buffalo Grove
under way

Registration for all students attending the Buffalo Grove High School this fall is being conducted now, according to Principal Chick Miller.

Junior students and athletes registered earlier this week. Sophomore students will register today, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Freshmen will register from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. tomorrow.

All students who were unable to register earlier in the week may register Saturday, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

During registration students receive their schedule of classes for the school year. They also must turn in their emergency health forms, pay fees for the year, and pick up their I. D. cards.

Tours of the new school were originally planned for registration week, according to Miller. However, the tours have been canceled since last minute maintenance work on the school is still in progress, he said.

Construction on the academic area of the school is now substantially complete, although a few areas of the school will not be complete until a month or two after school opens, he said.

About 1,400 students should be enrolled in the high school by the time school starts, he said.

Park district water

The Wheeling Park District will sponsor its first annual water carnival Saturday at Community Outdoor Pool.

Special events, including a greased watermelon contest, relay races, a dive-for-dollar and other games are planned. Children will be divided up to compete by age groups.

Prizes from the pool concession stand will be awarded to the winners in each contest.

EXPLOSIVE SOCCER games were just one of the many activities featured at the Canstater Volksfest this past weekend in Buffalo Grove. The fest, conducted at the Schwaben Soccer Center, is a German-American celebration similar to the traditional Oktoberfest. More than 10,000 persons participated in the two-day festival, held in Buffalo Grove for the first time this year.

Tree recycling plant to be built 'within a year'

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

A new tree recycling plant east of Wheeling will be built, "probably within the year," according to Chief Forester Samuel Gabriel of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The Cook County Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners voted Monday to award a contract for the construction of the plant, he said.

Plans for the plant have been under way for several months. However, the forest preserve district had postponed awarding a final contract until it received word on a state bill which might have allowed for open burning of area trees once again.

THE DISTRICT had feared that if open burning of trees were permitted the new plant might be unnecessary. However, last week Gov. Daniel Walker vetoed the bill in question.

The recycling plant is intended as a solution to a long-standing problem with diseased tree disposal in the area.

Before the 1971 ban on open tree burning, many Northwest suburbs, along with private firms, had burned diseased trees at the district site where the plant will be located. Since the ban most trees have been sent to sanitary landfills. However, owners of the landfills are reluctant to accept diseased trees, because of the space they take up.

The new plant should eliminate this problem. Plant equipment will strip of diseased portions of the trees, such as the bark, leaving the rest of the wood usable for commercial purposes. Bark and other non-usable wood will be chipped up.

UNDER THE TERMS of the contract which the board approved, the Rossi Contracting Co. will be licensed to build and operate the recycling plant. The company will assume all plant construction costs, which should be between $125,000 and $185,000, according to James Tyndall, district assistant general superintendent.

Thus the company will own the plant equipment, although the forest preserve will retain ownership of the site.

Prior to the opening of the new plant, the district will put out a letter to all previous users of the burning site, Tyndall said. The letter will detail the plant services and costs for using it, which have not been determined at this time.

"We're hoping that the same people who used the burning site previously will use the new plant," Gabriel said.

According to Gabriel, preliminary electrical work on the plant has begun already. The plant should be ready for use within a few months, he said.

What's best for 'whose' children?

by MARY HOULIHAN
A News Analysis

"What's best for the children?"

All at River Trails Dist. 16 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to add in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart," the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial," according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocese property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 26 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth. That's our whole philosophy, to get Maryville involved in the community. I think it's much healthier for the children and for the community."

AS FOR PARENTS' worries that students from the special education facility will have problems in being on the same campus with students from the junior high school, Father Smyth foresees no great difficulties. They're mixing now (in the regular district schools), he said, so they're really worrying about nothing. I personally can't see any real problems outside of the two I would mention of transportation and communication — that is, that Maryville would be physically closer."

Retzlaff agrees with Smyth in his assessment of potential problems at the junior high school site. I feel up until recently, there's been a very healthy, positive acceptance of our educating the Maryville students in the district," Retzlaff said.

When the Maryville children were first integrated into the schools in the district outside River Road five years ago, it was more of a novelty," Retzlaff explained. "They said to their friends, 'here, my kid has a black kid in his room.' It wasn't as if they were living next door."

"I feel there is throughout the public now a sort of fear of the unknown," Retzlaff said. "I do not feel as if most of the public has had that much contact with the students from Maryville. But I feel obliged to say these youngsters are human beings with some basic human needs that need to be satisfied in all youngsters."

Wheeling High School Naval Junior ROTC (NJROTC) Cadets may pick up uniforms for the 1973-74 school year from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. today through Friday at the school.

There are openings in the first year NJROTC classes for girls and boys, according to Capt. Adrian Lorentson, U.S. Navy (Retired), naval science instructor. Lorentson said students from outside High School Dist. 214 are eligible to enroll in the classes provided that transportation can be arranged.

Lorentson will be available to discuss the NJROTC program during registration that is being conducted this week at the school.

The NJROTC Drill Team will begin practice at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 20. This is a voluntary extracurricular activity open to any NJROTC cadet. Any cadet who is interested in trying out for the drill team should attend the first practice.

The drill team is commanded by Cadet Lt. Kenneth May of Buffalo Grove, a senior at Wheeling High School. The team is coached by Gunner Sgt. David Turner, the assistant naval science instructor.

Just Politics...by Bob Lahey

U.S. Rep. Phil Crane tops Conservatives' list

U. S. Rep. Phillip M. Crane, R-12th, was one of 28 of the 435 members of the U. S. House of Representatives to be given a 100 per cent rating for his voting record by the American Conservative Union.

Crane is one of only 11 congressmen who have maintained a 100 per cent record on the ACU scale since it started rating representatives in 1971.

He is a member of the ACU's board of directors.

The ACU based its ratings on 13 votes of particular interest to the group's goals in the first eight months of the 93rd Congress.

Crane voted for the ACU position on 11 of the 13 votes, missing two votes.

Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, got an 80 per cent rating from the ACU, voting for its position eight times, against the ACU twice, and missing three votes.

AMONG THE votes used by the ACU to evaluate the conservatism of members of Congress was one on an amendment sponsored by Crane, to authorize the private purchase, ownership and sale of gold. The amendment was defeated in a 162-162 tie vote.

Crane, of course, voted for the measure. It was among the three votes which Young missed.

Young got negative ratings from the ACU on two votes. He voted for a motion to adopt a rule to permit consideration of a resolution creating an Atlantic Union delegation to participate in a convention to consider a federal union of the NATO democracies. Crane voted against the motion.

Young also opposed the ACU position in voting against an amendment to reduce the 1974 appropriation for arts and humanities from $145 million to $81 million. Crane voted for the amendment.

Like other rating surveys conducted by special interest groups, the ACU survey reflects the bias of the group's purposes. Of the 13 issues on which the survey was based, the ACU gave double weight to one vote, on a conference report on a bill to extend for one year the President's authority to impose wage and price controls, which was adopted by a 267-115 vote. Crane voted against the measure; Young was absent.

THE ACU reported that while 28 congressmen had 100 per cent voting records, according to its standards, 63 scored zero. The average rating in the House was 43 per cent, with Republicans averaging 65 per cent, and Democrats 26 per cent.

Mississippi representatives led the ACU ratings, with a cumulative rating of 83 per cent. Rhode Island legislators — there are only two — had a combined average of 8 per cent.

Among Illinoisans, Rep. Ralph Metcalfe, D-Chicago; Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Chicago, one-time candidate for the U. S. Senate; and Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-West Frankfort, got zero ratings from the ACU. Rep. Robert Michel, R-Peoria, was the only other Illinois congressman besides Crane to receive a 100 per cent rating.

Ah, sweet Marion, Ill., a town without taxes

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — The government of this southern Illinois town of 11,000 is making man-bites-dog-type news. Instead of raising its property taxes it is dropping them completely.

The city council has resolved simply not to pass a tax levy ordinance this year, in effect wiping out the city property tax.

To Mayor Robert L. Butler, the move seems only logical. Since he came to office in 1964, property taxes in Marion have been cut in seven of the past nine years.

In the Northwest suburbs, only Schaumburg has achieved the blissful state of no municipal taxation on real estate. The City of Rolling Meadows is next closest with the smallest real estate tax. Residents of both suburban communities still pay substantial taxes for schools, etc., however.

MARION HAS HARDLY suffered as it relinquished its property taxes.

During these years, the city built a $122,000 brick clock tower in its downtown square and a $130,000 fire station, bought a $50,000 fire truck to put in it, and installed $24,000 worth of public toilets.

Most of the time it paid cash — including $200,000 for improvements that tripled the capacity of its city reservoir. With all this, the city currently enjoys a $250,000 surplus.

Butler's cash down policy is the same way he handled his own finances.

"Never in my life have I ever bought a car or a suit of clothes or even my home on credit," the 46-year-old attorney said in an interview. "I figured that if I couldn't afford to pay cash for it, I didn't need it."

Back in 1964, he said, Marion was $80,000 in the red and the property tax on a home assessed at $10,000 was $112.

"The city council determined that if the city could ever get out of the red, an effort must be made to reduce property taxes," Butler said. "It was a direct result of that determination that taxes were reduced seven out of nine years."

"Each year, the council has budgeted for expenditures less than the amount of anticipated revenue. We have adopted this as a way of being reasonably sure sufficient funds would be available to meet expenses in case the revenue didn't reach the expected level. More often than not, the revenue reached or surpassed the anticipated figure."

SURPLUSES BEGAN building up. Annexations were pushed to broaden the city's sales tax base.

Now, Marion's yearly income includes $365,000 from the state sales tax, $300,000 from water department operations, $196,000 from federal revenue sharing, $13,000 from sewer department operations, $78,000 from the state income tax and just $47,000 from the property tax.

NO ELEPHANTS available so Carl R. Hansen, Republican committeeman for Elk Grove Township, swallowed his partisanship and mounted a mule, symbol of the opposition party, for the ride up the mountain. The ride was on the island of Santorini off the coast of Greece during Hansen's recent vacation trip there.

Watch on Washington

by CLARK R. MOLLENIHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The clouds of corruption extending over President Richard Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew point up anew the defects in our system of election and succession under the Constitution.

Fixed four-year terms for the presidency trap the nation until 1977, a condition that could not exist under the British Parliamentary system.

Scandals exposed thus far by the Senate Watergate hearings and other investigations would have toppled the Nixon government months ago under the British system.

The fixed four-year term has distinct long-range advantages when in the hands of any reasonably competent, honest and well-motivated administration. However, the Watergate inquiry shows that the constitutional limitation of a president to two terms is not a sufficient barrier to prevent the buildup of arbitrary practices more usually associated with dictatorships.

It is not pleasant to contemplate what "four more years" might have produced in a Nixon White House had H. R. (Bob) Haldeman remained as chief-of-staff and John D. Ehrlichman continued as a special assistant for domestic programs.

Even with them gone, the problem of authoritarian government still is not solved if President Nixon is able to avoid the consequences of his actions for the next 3½ years.

Under the British system, the prime minister and the majority party live under constant threat of a "no confidence" vote on any basic issue that is permitted to go unattended or where questions of corruption or mismanagement are not answered in Parliament.

It is doubtful that the arrogance involved in the Watergate coverup could have taken place if President Nixon had been faced with questions a British prime minister must face and answer for the opposition.

The American system provides no legal quorum for the questioning of the President. Therefore he can, by silence, disregard demands for an open press conference and can restrict his political responses to the carefully-worded speeches.

Under a different governmental system, questions raised by U.S. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., about the serial numbers on the $5,300 in $100 bills found on the Watergate burglars would have confronted Nixon last July and August — weeks before the election.

Similarly, questions about the "Mexican connection" of the $89,000 in checks deposited in the bank account of Watergate burglar Bernard Barker would have faced Nixon. He could not have been blocked by questions raised last October by Representative Wright Patman's House Banking and Currency Committee.

A Prime Minister and his cabinet ministers are fully accountable to the Parliament in Britain. There is no mistaken belief there that "executive privilege" permits them to bury forever the communications between top executives of the government.

Also, the Parliamentary system does not provide a specific individual as successor to the prime minister while our system allows for succession of the President by the vice-president.

Under our constitution, we take for granted that it will be an unblemished vice-president who will take over in event of a vacancy in the office of President.

Mr. Agnew was entitled to that presumption until the recent revelations that a federal grand jury is investigating allegations of bribery and tax evasion and has requested his financial records from 1962.

This investigation must be assumed to be serious since it is unlikely a Republican administration would embark on a frivolous investigation of a Republican vice-president.

'After awhile, you hardly notice the heat'

If there were men of generally recognized ability and stature in the immediate chain of succession behind Nixon and Agnew, a Democratic Congress might be tempted to attempt to seize even a slim case for impeachment of the two Republicans.

But the Democrats in line of succession are House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma and Senate President Pro-Tem James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

Democrats are well aware of questions about Albert's leadership of the House. Liberals of both parties cringe at the thought of Eastland, an arch conservative, being in a position one heartbeat from the presidency.

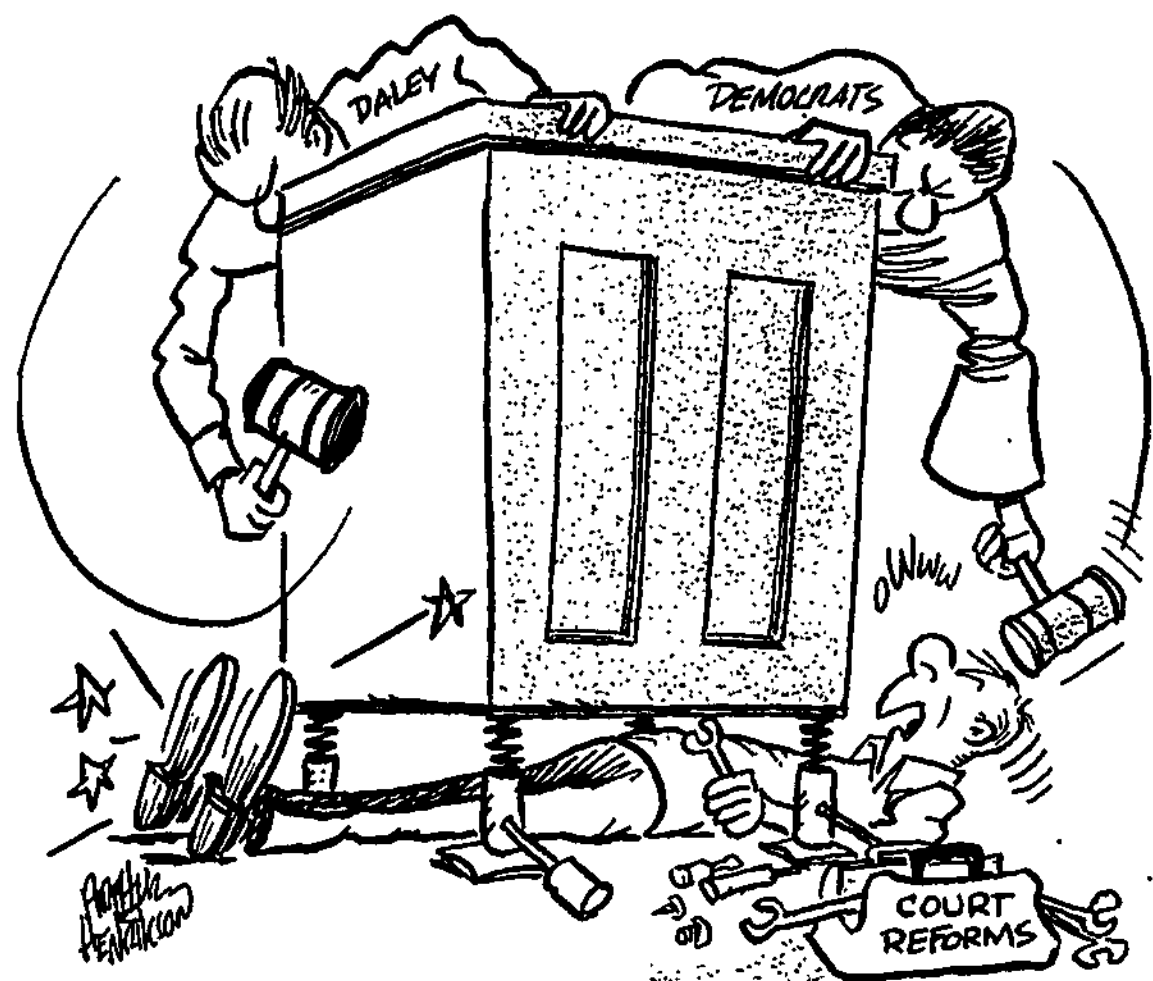

Congressional leaders therefore must give thought not only to the question of whether President Nixon is guilty of "high crimes or misdemeanors" that merit removal from office, but must weigh the alternative for succession.

Even if a floundering nation muddles through more than three years, guided by a self-crippled president, it would be advised to consider adopting some of the mechanisms of the British system to assure future accountability by our chief executives.

Informal, periodic president-controlled press conferences are an ineffective substitute for the stringent parliamentary questioning of the prime minister.

(Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1973)

Brian's song

Herald editorial

We need justice reforms

It is encouraging to see progress being made, though painfully, toward upgrading many facets of criminal justice in Illinois.

A chief instigator of these reform movements is Rep. Brian Duff, R-Wilmette, whose district includes the northern half of Wheeling Township. As chairman of the House Judiciary Committee concerned with criminal procedures in Illinois courts, Duff has adopted as his top priorities passage of a number of court reforms.

Not all of his proposals are new. Some have been talked about in Springfield for years. But Duff succeeded in the past legislative session in garnering substantial support in the state House of Representatives.

Unfortunately, his programs were stalled in the Senate by Democrats loyal to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, who view most progressive measures in the court system as a threat to patronage jobs and political control over the selection of judges.

Among the more outstanding of Duff's proposals is a measure to institute a program of statewide probation administration, making the state responsible for uniform rules and enforcement, and for footing the major share of the bill now borne by counties.

Duff believes, correctly we think, that an investment of some $18 million per year (to start) would produce, through a reduction in incarceration of non-dangerous offenders and repeating law-violators, a huge saving in terms of both money and human values to our society.

He points out that, in many counties, lone probation officers are faced with hundreds of clients, whom they can barely keep track of, let alone supervise.

Duff points to examples such as Macon County, where one probation officer handles an average of 300 cases. In Cook County, 124 adult probation officers are charged with supervision of more than 150 probationers each. But, the workload of the Cook County probation worker embodies a much higher degree of violent or dangerous convicts.

It seems apparent that counties do not have the financial means to operate a probation system which holds any hope of meaningful rehabilitation of offenders.

The probation system proposed by Duff is cited only as an example of the merit of his overall program.

He also urges a constitutional referendum to change the selection of judges from election to merit appointment; to modify the grand jury system to grant more protection to defendants; to provide legal counsel for any person charged with a misdemeanor which carries a possible jail sentence.

These proposals all have merit, particularly as they relate to the poor.

One of Duff's major concerns is that the law, as practiced from day to day, is virtually meaningless to the poor.

He cites a quotation, "If the law does not serve society, society will not serve the law. If the law does not serve the poor, the poor will not serve the law."

We hope that Brian Duff continues this quest for improvements in our system of law and that he is joined by other legislators in his effort to break through the partisan roadblock established by the patronage mentality of Chicago politicians.

Bombing's 'cover story'

by HOWARD FIELDS

WASHINGTON — Playing the press off against the public and generally talking out of two sides of the mouth have long been identified with the Washington bureaucratic syndrome.

It boils down to a standard for the "ins" and a standard for the "outs." Such things as the Watergate scandal and credibility gaps are partially the result of the syndrome.

Seldom, however, does there emerge a simultaneous example. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, has provided one, using a straight face and with obvious sincerity.

While testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Moorer accused the press of distorting accounts of the coverup of U.S. bombing activities in Cambodia for 14 months during 1969 and 1970.

"It would be helpful if we could get some straight press reporting," Moorer said, during questioning about the coverup of Cambodia bombing.

He described the practice of keeping two reporting systems for the 3,600 B52 sorties over Cambodia.

One list, which showed the strikes actually took place in Cambodia, went to a select few persons in the Pentagon and

Adm. Thomas Moorer

White House.

The other showed the strikes as having taken place in South Vietnam and was provided as "a cover" to explain the missions. Cambodia was supposed to be neutral and Americans weren't supposed to be bombing there.

Moorer said this dual reporting system had been going on since 1966 and it was intended "for the purposes of replying to public queries."

Whether the bombing should have been secret is another issue. What is relevant here is Moorer's justification for deceiving the press and then criticizing it for its alleged lack of straight reporting.

The news media has been telling the American public all kinds of things based on government-supplied information, including the false stories that thousands of sorties were flown in South Vietnam in 1969 and 1970 when the planes were actually bombing Cambodia.

Except where a reporter actually witnesses an event taking place, his stories are only as accurate as the information supplied to him, whether it's from a source he won't identify or from the thousands of news releases churned out by government word merchants.

If it's in error, most of the time you can blame the provider, not the bearer, of the news.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., seems to feel the same way. In a floor speech last fall, Hart criticized closed committee hearings:

"We tend to be very oversensitive and to get mad at the press when we see something reported as having occurred in a committee meeting. We ought to get mad at ourselves if the press report is inaccurate. In all probability it is, because we slammed the door in their face. We would not let them in to see the whole business."

"Depending on who says what occurred after it is over," he added, "that is inevitably the way the press is going to report it." (UPI)

Our readers write

Pornography's foes 'crackpots'

Mr. William D. North of Arlington Heights is to be congratulated for his brilliant analysis regarding the paradox of "pornography," his dissection of the prevailing situation clearly and concisely giving evidence to the fact that "pornography" is what any particular person might think it is.

Unfortunately, every society in all periods of history and in every nation, has had its Watchers of Morals, those "saintly" morons who try to cram their own brand of Right vs. Wrong down the throat of their neighbors. Today, we see this brand of dictatorship not only in those completely hazy areas regarding "pornography," but in all subjects with which the Know-it-Alls disagree.

Abortion, for example. Completely ignoring the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court said it was any woman's right to decide whether or not she should have an abortion, there are those who are still screaming "sin" and "murder" simply because they do not believe in abortion; and they cannot be wrong in any moral pronouncement! This is another way of saying that they would deny the rest of society the very basic freedom of choice. In short, these damn fools would deny another person the right to his own belief!

It is the same crackpots who, in their frantic effort to make the rest of society conform to their own personal beliefs, are now making a big, useless noise about "pornography," the same breed of Nut who would have the police act as Censors — and who would probably have society read nothing but the Bible.

My advice to the police is to ignore these crackpots.

Should censorship ever work, what would be the next logical step? Censorship of the free press, the same free press that exposed Watergate? Or perhaps they would decide how their neighbors should vote, or the religion in which their neighbor should believe. Since they are immune to all logic, they will quickly tell you that their religion is the only "truth faith!"

Medieval Europe saw this very thing happen, and for over 200 years the arts and sciences came to a complete standstill! Why? Because they, in the form of the Pope and other crackpots, decided that all anyone needed to know was contained in the Bible! It was this same believe-as-I-do-or-else that led to the Italian and Spanish Inquisition, in which millions of innocent people — even children — were torn apart with a savagery equalled only by the Nazi sadists in Hitler's Germany.

John F. Kennedy summed it up very well when he said: "Censorship is basically against human rights. The lock on the door of the legislature, the parliament or assembly hall, by order of the King, the Commissar, or the Führer, has historically been followed or preceded by a lock on the door of the printer's, the publisher's or the bookseller's."

President Kennedy forgot to mention the local crackpots who watch everyone's morals but their own!

Latest development in the explosion of interest rates on savings is a flexible-rate savings certificate, offered by a Philadelphia bank, whose rate of interest is geared to the cost of living. It will pay up to 10 per cent on savings deposits if the Consumer Price Index rises by stipulated amounts.

Ten per cent on savings! Incredible, only a few months ago. It's as much or more than a Wall Street investor has conservatively expected to realize in stocks. (A much-quoted University of Chicago study puts the average long-term gain in stock prices at 9.3 per cent a year.)

Amid a bewildering array of lures by the savings institutions, promised "effective yields" of 8 per cent and more are common. But any guide to the new higher range of interest rates should include a cautionary note.

There's a trap in all this that can snag the unwary. It's a catch in the time deposit regulations.

FEDERAL AGENCIES — If this is your first day in class — tell savings institutions how much interest they can pay on various types of accounts. The basic rate is for a "pass-book account" — the ordinary kind, from which you can withdraw money at any time.

Higher rates are allowed on time deposits, or savings certificates, where there's a commitment to keep the money on deposit, without withdrawals, for periods up to seven years.

In July, Washington announced new interest ceilings. On passbook accounts, the maximum rate was raised from 4 and one-half to 5 per cent for commercial banks, and from 5 to five and one-quarter per cent for savings banks and S&Ls.

NOTE: Your bank or S&L doesn't HAVE to pay a higher rate now. It merely may. And most thrift institutions that are offering higher rates are not automatically applying it to existing accounts. You'll have to inquire about the policy, wherever your savings are, and probably you'll have to take your passbook in and specifically request to be put on the higher rate.

On time deposits, the new regulations allow increases of from one-quarter to three-quarters of a per cent, the top specified rate being six and three-quarter per cent on deposits committed for a minimum of two-and-a-half years.

But just to make things interesting (and confusing), there is what bankers are calling the "wild card" certificates. The new regulations say there is NO limit on time deposits of at least $1,000 for four to seven years.

Most offerings have been 7 to 7 and one-half per cent on the "wild card" certificates, but some of the more competitive institutions have gone to 8 per cent — an "effective yield" per year, over the full term, of nearly 8 and one-half per cent.

ONE BANK calculates that at its 7.82 per cent rate (an effective 8.25), $10,000 grows to $17,417 in seven years.

On other time deposits — which cannot be for an indefinite term, but must be left for a specified number of months or years — these are the top rates permitted by the new regulations. The "annual yield" figure is based on daily compounding, when principal and interest are on deposit for the full year.

- 90 days to one year: 5.75 per cent; yield, 6 per cent.

- 1 year to two and one-half years: 6.50 per cent; yield, 6.81.

- Two and one-half years to 4 years: 6.75 per cent; yield, 7.35.

The catch in the time deposit regulations is a clause providing a stiff penalty for premature withdrawal.

Your interest, for however long your money has been on deposit, is cut down to the passbook rate in effect at the time — PLUS a penalty charge of three months' interest.

So think at least twice before getting yourself locked into a time deposit. Remember that there's a difference between such a commitment of your money and rainy-day savings.

Suppose you're smugly earning a fat seven and one-half per cent with your time deposit, on the day that rain decides to fall in your life. If you have to pull your money out, you'll wind up with less than if you'd put it into a regular passbook account to begin with.

Savings for emergencies, and extraordinary expenditures, come first. After that, you can tie your money up in investments that are less liquid.

Four 'electric chairs' at health congress show

Four "electric chairs" will be features of Honeywell's exhibit at the American Health Congress show in Chicago's McCormick Place through Aug. 23.

Not at all dangerous, the electric chairs are comfortable egg-shaped units fitted with stereophonic headsets, and facing a television monitor screen. Seated in them, viewers can see a 5-minute videotape about hospital automation.

Honeywell will also spotlight its compact security/centralization console which brings mechanical and electrical control to an operator's fingertips.

Business Today

by JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON — Britain's foreign business is plunging deeper than ever into the red. The country's 1973 balance of payments may well show an all-time record deficit of $3.75 billion, the government says.

"But the government is not going to lose its nerve. If the public holds steady behind the government it will reap the benefits from an export boom," predicted Trade and Industry Secretary Peter Walker.

But Peter Shore, Labor opposition parliamentary spokesman on Europe, described Britain's economic plight as "disastrous."

"While the nation dozes and slumbers on its summer beaches," he said, "its prosperity is fast ebbing away and we are rushing to meet, totally unprepared, the greatest of postwar economic crises."

These conflicting comments were sparked by a Trade Department announcement that Britain bought $397.5 million more abroad in July than she exported to foreign countries.

During the past three months official figures have recorded an average monthly foreign trade deficit of $422.5 million.

FOR THE COUNTRY that traditionally must "export or die," the London Financial Times described this trend as "disquieting."

"Yesterday's business indicators," it said editorially, "show no change but a deepening of trends which were already sufficiently disquieting."

"The government will view the figures with some concern," said the Guardian newspaper.

Government officials estimated on the basis of the latest figures Britain's overall foreign business currently is running into the red at the rate of $3.33 billion — the highest balance of payments deficit in the country's history.

In the big economic crisis of 1964-66 it was only about $2 billion. It was about that when the former British Labor party government had to devalue the pound sterling in November, 1967.

It is one third higher than the deficit of $2.5 billion predicted earlier this year by the London and Cambridge Economic Bulletin. This prediction was postponed at the time by the government as "greatly exaggerated."

What worries the government is that Britain is sliding deeper into the red at a time when exports, sparked by a heavily devalued pound, have reached record levels.

BUT THE TRADE Department said imports are rising still faster.

The Marriage Encounter

Prescription for a happier marriage

by BILLIE BACHUBER

Be honest. Has that "sparkle" dimmed just a little in your otherwise very solid marriage? Are you among those conventionally "happily marrieds" who keep so busy at jobs, in the community and at other activities that you find little time just for yourselves? The Marriage Encounter may hold startling revelations for you.

Perhaps one or both of you marriage partners are so wrapped up in concern for your children that the kids' health, education and interests come first.

Or maybe, you, the husband, put most of your attention to bills, business and ball games.

And you, the wife, with bridge, fixing up the house, pursuing a career, shopping or with your women friends. So what? Your marriage is good, and you have no problems. The Marriage Encounter is designed especially for you.

THE MARRIAGE Encounter is a special weekend program that is teaching techniques of loving communication to married couples who want to enhance the marriage relationship. Through the program, thousands of couples throughout Europe and the United States, who consider their marriage a "happy one" are taking a deeper look into their partnership.

"The Marriage Encounter lends a deepness and understanding to marriage and to the marriage relationship that has been overlooked. It lays out the marriage relationship precisely and simply," explained Bill Judy of Mount Prospect.

Bill and wife Ann opted for the weekend encounter when friends convinced them not to miss this golden opportunity to examine their lives together. "Our friends told us the encounter was the most important weekend in their lives," Bill said.

But at first Bill, in his early forties and masculine-minded, was not convinced to take part in the program because — as he puts it — "I didn't feel I was lacking!"

ANN, AN ATTRACTIVE homemaker who keeps busy at home and in the community, liked the idea of personally facing up to marriage. "I knew we had a good marriage but I realized that much of our (marital) talk was just surface who've experienced the weekend program designed to deepen the marriage relationship. The Wagners are now a team teaching other couples.

Basic in the encounter experience is developing better communication of feelings.

talk," she said with a smile.

She began to wonder if she and Bill would really "know" one another when Karne, 16, Beth, 14, and Tom, 8, left home, she added.

Weighing advice from a male friend he respected, Bill Judy finally was convinced of its value when the Wagners, good neighbors, excitedly touted their weekend experience.

The Judys attended their weekend training sessions at Bishop Lane in Rockford. "It was fantastic!" the couple agree.

Neighbors Bill and Barbara Wagner also learned of the program from enthusiastic friends. Both found the prospect intriguing but were reluctant to try it, they recalled. It was Bill who suggested they go away for "the weekend" when he noticed a change he liked in their "encountered" friends.

"They were doing things for one another not out of a sense of obligation, but out of love," Bill said.

IN THEIR THIRTIES, Bill and Barb have four children: Billy, 3, Mark, 7, Susie, 8, and Carla Ann, 9. During their encounter experience — held at Aylesford Renewal Center located near Joliet — Barbara discovered she was devoting most of her concern to their children. Both Barb and Bill learned to look at each other honestly, and to share their feelings openly.

"You see your spouse trying to understand you, and it takes away the fear of expressing your feelings. An openness gradually evolves," the happy couple explained.

The Marriage Encounter, though generally attended by 15-25 other couples, is the most private weekend a couple can spend together. Three trained, experienced couples and a priest teach the techniques of loving communication through honest dialogue. Following each "lesson" couples retire to the privacy of their rooms to practice what they've been taught.

The weekend starts early on Friday evening, and if you are like the Wagners and the Judys, you'll approach your encounter with some apprehension. All four agreed they wondered — just a little — what they were getting into!

COUPLES RECEIVE warm welcomes from "greeters" when they reach their trying places. These volunteer couples often drive many miles just to be on hand to welcome newcomers. Couples who have experienced the encounter also will babysit with other families' children and even share expenses with them.

"Encounter couples have such a good thing going, they want everyone else to experience their happiness, too," Barbara pointed out.

A half hour to 45-minute "get-acquainted" time with coffee and snacks served opens a weekend that is filled with work, concentration and effort. The purpose of the encounter is to help couples to know each other more completely, and to love one another and God more deeply, said Mrs. Wagner. You experience the gamut of human emotions as husband and wife learn to reveal feelings openly without "reacting" with anger and hurt feelings, according to the couples who've experienced an encounter.

"The ability to express my feelings to Ann without confusing feelings with reactions is the most valuable thing I learned," declared Bill Judy.

Ann agrees with her husband, and adds, "If your spouse can accept you, you gain a new, positive self image."

BILL AND BARBARA Wagner, now a teaching team couple, said they learned, above all, to have confidence and trust in expressing to one another their hopes, fears, desires and ambitions.

"And I learned to think much more positively about myself, and to care more for others, especially for my husband," confided Barb.

Both couples now practice daily the communication techniques they discovered at the Marriage Encounter weekend. They hope other happily married couples will follow suit... "because the encounter makes good marriages great!"

Married couples interested in making a weekend encounter may telephone the Wagners at 394-1126 for information. Or they may call Bill and Ann Judy, 392-5255. Bill and Joyce Mondrand, directors of the Metropolitan Chicago Encounter program, also may be reached in Addison at 834-6974.

'Arms' donated for paramedic training

Learning to give injections used to be a problem. At Northwest Community Hospital it isn't any more — thanks to the efforts of the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club.

The club donated $500 to the hospital for the purchase of two artificial arms to be used in training paramedics. Before they were used, the paramedics practiced on each other.

These artificial limbs are extremely life-like. They have the look and feel of a real arm, even down to the veins used in giving injections or intravenous medication. When attached to a special device, they "bleed" and tell the students paramedic whether he has administered the IV properly.

THE TWO arms are part of the equipment the hospital has to help firemen and policemen from surrounding communities to qualify as paramedics. In addition, Northwest Community Hospital provides classes for the men, gives them experience in working with emergency cases and is in constant radio contact with them when they are called out on cardiac or trauma situations.

"We are the first hospital in the state of Illinois to act as a base station for paramedics," said Mrs. Barbara Lyon, supervisor of the program and the Mobile Intensive Care Unit Nurse at the hospital, "and we are proud of that distinction."

Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club is proud to have been part of the development of such a program, too, according to its president, Mrs. Larry Wendt.

Speaking of . . .

The wire that won West

by KAY MARSH

The U.S. Postal Service recently announced a series of three commemorative postage stamps honoring aspects of life in Rural America.

Well, what subjects would you pick, if you had to choose for the series?

A growing number of Northern Illinois residents think that the introduction of barbed wire might well be worth its own commemorative stamp for the role it played in the settlement of this country.

Did you know that DeKalb, Ill., some 60 miles from Chicago, is the home of barbed wire, "the wire that won the West?" That there are thousands of barbed wire collectors, who buy and trade and sell? That there's a special monthly magazine for barbed wire collectors, and shows all over the country?

Well, I didn't either, until the recent Midwest Barbed Wire Show, which celebrated the centennial of barbed wire manufacture. Hosted by the Land of Lincoln Barbed Wire Collectors, the show was held July 28 and 29 at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb. And it was in almost the same location where it all began a hundred years ago.

THERE HAD, OF course, been earlier attempts to make wire. And pioneers on the Illinois prairies, lacking the wood and stone that made the fences of the East, had planted osage oranges for hedges and barriers. But it was in 1873 that Henry M. Rose of Waterman Station, Ill., exhibited his wooden fencing with metallic points at the DeKalb County Fair.

There were three men attending that fair who, independent of each other, thought of better ways to attach metal barbs, pricklers, suckers or points mounted on metal wires. All were to gain fame for their contributions in helping the homesteaders protect their crops from large herds of wandering cattle, and helping the ranchers keep their cattle in without injury. They were Joseph F. Glidden, Jacob Haish and Isaac L. Ellwood, all of whom got U.S. patents

Glidden, however, started to manufacture his invention in 1873. Encouraged by his wife, he made barbed wire on a machine fashioned from a coffee mill from the kitchen of his DeKalb farm home. Glidden is generally accepted as the inventor of barbed wire as we know it today, though there were years of suits and litigation.

COLONEL L. L. Ellwood bought half an interest in Glidden's patent, plus more than 90 other patent rights. It was his nephew, the famous John W. "Bet-a-million" Gates, who opened up the lucrative Texas market with a public demonstration of barbed wire's effectiveness in San Antonio. He had yelling cowboys drive stampeding longhorns into a barbed wire corral in Alamo Plaza. The cattle broke in all directions, charging the fence. But the eight strands of barbed wire held firm, the cattlemen were convinced, and Gates could hardly keep up with all the orders.

Today, a hundred years and more than 600 patents later, the Glidden wire, known as "The Winner," is still being manufactured. It began the most successful manufacture of barbed wire ever conducted.

That's the event the barbed wire collectors celebrated at the centennial show. And these are the reasons collectors of stamps and barbed wire are continuing their efforts to induce the Postmaster General of the U.S. to issue a commemorative postage stamp for barbed wire in 1974. They urge you, if interested, to write your Congressman.

Oh, yes, the three events the Postal Service chose to illustrate life in Rural America are the 100th anniversary of the introduction of Angus cattle into the United States, the 100th anniversary of the introduction of Kansas hard winter wheat into the U.S. and the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Chautauqua, which brought celebrities of the arts to smaller communities and made a major contribution to the cultural life of Rural America.

POSTSCRIPT: Speaking of Rural Americana, the DeKalb County Fair is still going strong. This year's fair will be held Sept. 5 through 9, at Sandwich, Ill. It's well worth the drive, if you'd like to treat your family to a bit of nostalgia plus all the fun of an old-fashioned county fair. Advertisements promise such events as harness races, tractor pulls, tent theater, livestock exhibits, and arts and crafts. The youngsters always seem to head first for the rides, but don't miss the horticultural displays. They're fantastic.

'Snap' publicity course for club news chairmen

The kids won't be the only ones going back to school next month. So will some of those lucky (?) clubwomen who have been selected as publicity chairmen of their organizations.

These lucky women can learn everything they have to know about publicity in just a few hours by attending one of the two publicity workshops to be held Thursday and Friday, Sept. 6 and 7.

There's no tuition, or matriculation fees, no final exams and everyone will be graduated "cum laude" according to "Professor" Marianne Scott who will conduct the courses. "Diplomas" will be conferred upon all.

SPEAKING WILL be Marianne Scott, women's editor of the nine daily Herald newspapers published by Paddock Publications, and her assistant, Dorie McClellan. Professional journalists, both are graduates of the University of Illinois School of Journalism. With Paddock for 20 years, they are experts in the field of suburban women's reporting.

Squeezed into just 2½ hours, the morning courses will include coffee and rolls plus loads of hints on photos and writing news releases.

Registrars for the course may be reached by calling the Herald offices: 394-2300, Extension 251. In Des Plaines, the number is 297-6633 (ask for Karen Thompson).

The course begins at 9 a.m. and concludes at 11:30. Thursday's session will be held in the Plum Grove Club, Plum Grove Estates, Palatine, and Friday's will be held at Northwest Suburban YMCA, Des Plaines. The "students" may attend whichever class is more convenient.

Invited are publicity chairmen and presidents of all area clubs whose news appears in the women's pages of the Herald.

LAUGHTER IS part of the fun for those attending the snap course in writing club news releases. Presented by the women's department of the Herald newspapers, the course guarantees that all will earn "diplomas" and all will become pros in just a few short hours. Students pictured are "graduates" of the class of '72.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas C. Bach

A 'do-it-yourself' wedding with barbecues and do-si-do

Barbecues and square dancing along with rock and old time tunes were features at the wedding reception of Connie Lynn Anderson and Douglas Gail Bach. The reception, held in Palatine Fireman's Hall for 125 guests, followed the pair's 7 p.m. wedding Aug. 4 in St. Paul Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect.

Connie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold R. Anderson, 3 S. Audrey Lane, Mount Prospect, describes the double ring service as a "do it yourself" wedding.

She and Doug, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gail Bach, 3 S. Owen St., Mount Prospect, wrote their own vows. Connie's brother, Steven, who is studying for the ministry, gave a sermonette and also played a guitar number. Steven was also one of the ushers, and her eight-year-old sister, Lynette, junior bridesmaid, sang the opening solo. Connie and her mother made all the gowns.

WHITE CHIFFON trimmed in lace was chosen for Connie's gown. It was made with double bell sleeves bordered in lace, square neckline and wide waist band with large back bow. Lace also edged her fingertip veil, and she carried a cascade of rainbow daisies, white carnations and baby's breath.

The rainbow theme was also carried out in the maid's gowns. Nancy Anderson, sister-in-law of the bride, Palatine, was matron of honor wearing a blue dotted Swiss and lace gown fashioned similarly to the bride's gown. Bridesmaids were the groom's sisters, Sandra and Beverly Bach, Mount Prospect, and Lynette who were in pink, green and lavender, respectively. All carried snowballs in shades to match their gowns with carnations and baby's breath.

DAVID BACH, Mount Prospect, was his cousin's best man, and besides Steven, ushers were Michael Tolt and the groom's 13-year-old brother, Gerald, Mount Prospect.

First and second grade teacher at St. Paul Lutheran School, Round Lake, Connie is a '69 graduate of Forest View High School. She attended Concordia Junior College in Milwaukee, Concordia College in St. Paul, Minn., and was graduated this July from Concordia Teachers College, River Forest.

Doug is a '69 graduate of Prospect High School. He is with Powers Regulator Co., Northbrook, and the newlyweds are now residing in their own home in Island Lake.

Orderly awarded $200 scholarship

Ronald Tanouye of Hoffman Estates, an emergency room orderly at Northwest Community Hospital, was recently presented with a $200 scholarship awarded by the Women's auxiliary of the hospital.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Akina Tanouye, Ronald graduated from Forest View High School and completed a pre-medical course at the University of Illinois, Champaign. Since then he has been working at Northwest and will discontinue his hospital duties in September to attend the University of Illinois Medical School.

Mrs. Ralph Cascairo, the auxiliary's chairman of health careers and scholarship, stated, "I am pleased that the award was given to a young man so intimately associated with the hospital."

Arlington pair wed in Long Grove Church

It was in the quaint, 100-year-old Long Grove Community Church that Patricia Ann Wollerman and Thomas Patrick MacCarthy repeated their marriage vows July 14. It is a small church of mostly white interior where shutters let in the bright, late afternoon sun for the 5:30 double ring service.

The minister read a poem he had written to go with the mood of the old church, and guitar and flute music was played. A buffet reception for 150 guests was held in Long Grove's Hobson House.

Patty and Tom are both from Arlington Heights but had to travel 300 miles to Culver-Stockton College, Canton, Mo., to meet. Both are graduates of Arlington High School. Patty studied at Culver-Stockton but graduated in 1973 from Northern Illinois University. Tom, a 1971 graduate of Culver-Stockton, is now an auditor with Schaumburg State Bank.

Patricia is employed in Gurnee in special education of Lake County.

MR. AND MRS. Paul E. Wollerman, 1111 N. Patton, Arlington Heights, are Patricia's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. MacCarthy, 1407 W. Miner, Arlington Heights, are Tom's parents.

Serving Patty as maid of honor was Debbie J. Berg of Rolling Meadows, and Bev Short, a cousin from Lake Zurich, and Ileana Johns, Chicago, were bridesmaids. The groom's brother, Con, Arlington Heights, was best man, and his brother-in-law, Patrick O'Donnell, Roselle, and his brother, Richard MacCarthy, were ushers.

Following an eight-day honeymoon in Los Angeles, Carmel and San Francisco, the newlyweds are residing in an apartment at 2240 Hassell Road, Hoffman Estates.

Seek garage sale donations

Members of Arlington Heights Nurses Club are asking all area homemakers for items that are "just lying around their homes and getting in the way." They will pick them up and add them to their collection of rummage to be sold at their annual garage sale.

Although the sale isn't scheduled until Oct. 12, the nurses are already busy collecting. Those with donations may call Rita Moody at 394-8675.

Proceeds of the sale will help raise funds for the club's lending closet which makes it possible for Arlington Heights residents to borrow sick room supplies for a period up to six months.

The club resumes its monthly meetings the end of September. Practicing or non-practicing RNs may call Marcia Sum, 255-1202, for further information.

by Dorothy Ritz

Today's young homemakers are receptive to new ideas and act on them swiftly. Elizabeth Swanson did precisely that with a recipe she had just obtained for a Caramel Cake. She had it in the oven in almost no time. It's a different kind of delicacy — more like pralines than cake. It was excellent fresh out of the oven, and I liked it even better the next day.

Here's how: Cream one pound of light brown sugar with one stick of softened butter or margarine, then add one cup of flour in which you have mixed one teaspoon of baking powder and one teaspoon of salt. Add one and a half teaspoons of vanilla and mix thoroughly. Then add four eggs and a heaping cup of chopped pecans. Mix all of this thoroughly and pour into a greased pan (13x9x2) and bake in a 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Cool and cut into squares. It can be cut into eight portions and topped with whipped cream.

Dear Dorothy: I was distressed to see you printing the reader's tip recommending discarded shower curtains for children's beds. Surely, you haven't forgotten the troubles of a few years ago when children's lives were endangered by the plastic bags used by the cleaners? — Jennifer Coppel

On the plastic bags, I agree. They continue to be a hazard to the young and ought to be knotted and thrown into the trash quickly. But as for using the shower curtain as a spare pad under a sheet, I find it hard to believe that heavy as they are, they present much danger.

Dear Dorothy: My husband likes the shirts with the so-called "French" front. But how do you get out the fuzz and dirt that will finally collect between the buttonholes? — Milly Scarbeau Brush out occasionally with a pipe cleaner.

Textbook a poor economics teacher

Now that we're in the middle of Phase IV, with a beef shortage, price controls and lots of confusion, do you ever get the feeling you don't understand economics?

Well, according to the Joint Council on Economic Education, a group of economists and educators who evaluate the way textbooks teach economics, you're probably right.

The council has recently completed a survey of social studies textbooks and have found that the books available to schools, particularly books for high school students, "are unlikely to assist a student either to identify an economic problem or to use economic analytical process."

The council conducted a similar survey 10 years ago and though the situation had improved this year, in the words of the report, "The high school students whose knowledge of economics has been acquired through courses circumscribed by the textbooks... would be quite unprepared to cope understandingly with most problems of economic public policy."

IT WOULDN'T be too hard to argue that one of the problems with Phase IV is that the people who thought it up had learned economics through one of those inadequate textbooks, I suppose, but that doesn't really do anything about the central problem.

Frequently parents and even school board members don't stop to think about how much at the mercy of textbooks publishers the schools and school children are.

Every year in each school district in the area, teachers and administrators go over textbooks in an attempt to find the best books available for their purposes. This summer when the High School

Dist. 214 Board approved the textbooks for this year, Ruben Conrad, the district coordinator who oversaw the textbook purchases, told the board a story about some science books the district once ordered.

The district got the books and found they were missing one chapter — on evolution. When Conrad called to complain, the publisher said, "Oh, so that's where those books went. Those were supposed to go to South Carolina."

MOST OF THE time, of course, textbooks arrive in the area complete with chapters on evolution and a lot of attention had been focused on books that have been changed to provide "realistic" views of minority groups to elementary school children.

Less attention has been paid to a language textbook that has been dropped by two local school districts because school officials discovered it doesn't teach punctuation.

Quality teaching is certainly the most important factor in how well students learn — but let's face it, textbooks are important, too. In High School Dist. 214 and in some other schools, teachers are trying to get away from the problem of inadequate single textbooks by going to the use of selected readings and paperback books instead of one large textbook.

That is certainly a good step, because as the Joint Council on Economic Education reminds us — just because something is in a textbook doesn't mean it's worth much.

NIPC to aid communities

Local governments in communities that lack fulltime administrators will be getting a helping hand from the eastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) this winter.

NIPC has announced plans to start a management assistance program to provide professional administrators to local governments which cannot afford or justify hiring a fulltime village manager or finance officer.

Although the program is aimed at municipalities, NIPC representatives said the program could be extended to other government entities such as school districts, park districts, and fire protection districts.

NIPC is seeking to hire a local government officer to head the management assistance program and supervise the six or seven traveling managers that NIPC will seek from area universities.

The traveling managers will probably be graduate students in public administration participating in an intern program.

Jack Pahl, NIPC vice president, said the interns would be assigned to local governments which need and request professional administrative assistance.

A study conducted by NIPC's intergovernmental relations committee recently pointed to management assistance as an area where local officials desired NIPC's help.

Pahl said that the program may have the added benefit of bringing adjacent communities closer together in their standards for zoning or government services and thus facilitate cooperation.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — There are several girls in our office who are curious about certain issues of birth control. We often hear of women having complete hysterectomies instead of tubal ligations. This seems rather senseless to us. Why would they choose a hysterectomy over a tubal ligation?

When a woman has her tubes tied are there any side effects? What actually happens? Does the ovary stop producing eggs, or does the tie prevent the eggs from reaching the womb. If the eggs are still produced, does this not cause some damage from the eggs backing up in the women's system?

How easy is it to obtain a tubal ligation? Is it a matter between patient and doctor, or are some hospitals opposed to it?

Dear Reader — Some women have a hysterectomy because they have problems with their uterus, such as a tumor or excessive bleeding. This, of course, also results in their being sterile. The body of the uterus and the cervix are frequent sites of cancer in the female. The complete removal of the uterus and cervix eliminates the likelihood of this problem in the future. Tying the tubes does not.

When the tubes are tied this literally removes the ability of the ova to pass down the tube into the uterus for implantation and pregnancy. This has no effect whatsoever on the ovaries. The ovaries are anatomically separated from the mouth or opening of the tubes. The egg is released by the ovary, passes a very short distance, literally in the open space, and enters the mouth of the tube. This means after the tubes are tied, ovulation continues as it did before. The eggs, however, cannot pass down the tubes, so they are literally absorbed by the body. They are not blocked up in the ovary, since they are released as they always have been. Into the free space.

This actually is somewhat different than the vasectomy in the male where there is a connecting tube between the body of the testicle to the prostate and point of exit of sperm cells. Tying off the vas does block the emission of sperm cells, but tying off the tube in a woman does not block the emission of ova.

Not all doctors are willing to do tubal ligations. It is against some doctor's religious code, and the same can be said about some hospitals. The only real way to find out is to discuss it with your own doctor, if one has reason to seriously consider such an operation.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Medically speaking, what is moderate drinking? How many drinks a day?

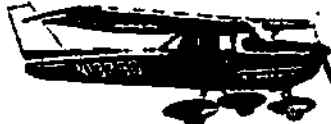

Dear Reader — A small amount of liquor for a person with underlying brain damage can cause uncontrollable rages or abnormal behavior. In a severe case of ulcers it may cause bleeding. Even in a healthy person, the accumulated affects can cause liver damage, brain damage and other medical problems.

No one should form a habit of having even one drink a day, and it's inadvisable to drink more than four drinks for any occasion. These should be drunk no more rapidly than one drink per hour and you should wait at least an hour after the last drink before driving. Drinks should be limited to one jigger of whiskey or a similar beverage in making a cocktail, or one glass of beer, or a half a glass of wine.

Young girls sought for Cowboy contest

A Miss Schaumburg Cowboy competition will be open to girls ages 13-17 in the Northwest suburbs, sponsored by the Schaumburg Cowboys in conjunction with their September rodeo.

Proceeds from the rodeo will go to help build the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

Girls interested in entering the competition must write a 100-word-or-less composition on "What Youth Activities Your Community Needs" and send it to Peggy Kosin, 804 Slingerland Dr., Schaumburg, chairman of the Miss Schaumburg Cowboy Committee.

The essays, handwritten or typed, must be mailed to Mrs. Kosin by Aug. 31. An interview will be conducted Sept. 7 at Schaumburg's Great Hall with all participants.

The girls will be judged on appearance, personality, and community involvement. This is not a beauty contest.

The final winner will be notified Sept. 10. She will receive a $50 savings bond, a cowgirl outfit of her choice and the honor of opening the three rodeo shows.

The rodeo will be presented at the DuPage County Fair Grounds, Sept. 21 and 22 at 7:30 p.m. and on Sept. 23 at 1:30 p.m.

Tickets are now on sale for $2.25 per adult (18 and over), $1.25 per child (4 years and older) and $7.50 for a family. Tickets are available at the Schaumburg State Bank, Woodfield Bank, and the First State Bank of Hanover Park.

Tournament open to all ages

Women, men, girls, boys may enter Paddock tennis

JUNIOR OLYMPIC champ — Trudi Rebsamen of Mount Prospect, takes the center stage after receiving the coveted first place gold medal for her victory in the girls 440 yard dash at the National AAU Junior Olympics held at the University of Michigan. The 15-year-old speedster went on to take a second gold medal in the finals of the 440 yard relay for girls.

Trudi Rebsamen takes AAU 440

Trudi Rebsamen of Mount Prospect captured first place in the girls 440 yard dash event with a performance of 55.3 at the Chevrolet Motor Division sponsored National AAU Junior Olympic Championships held at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

'Wheelie' event on Santa Fe card

Ossa-mounted first-year expert Dale Furst from Sanford, Mich., will try to move up in the point standings at Santa Fe Speedway tonight in another American Motorcycle Association-sanctioned program.

Along with the regular event spotlighting a 12-lap feature, Santa Fe will host a crowd-pleasing "Wheelie" contest. Starting time is 8:30 p.m.

Furst at present ranks fourth in the speedway point standings with 92 points. The Michigan rider has won one main event and has three third place finishes in main events this year. Dale has also captured six heats and one semi.

Santa Fe Speedway, 91st and Wolf Road, hosts exclusive professional motorcycle racing on Wednesday nights; the final cycling show of the year will be a half-mile show — the Carroll Resweber Classic — set for Wednesday night, Aug. 29.

Jacobsen records two match play victories

Schaumburg school teacher Tom Jacobsen, winner of the Chick Evans Amateur earlier this month, ousted two opponents on Monday in the Illinois State Match Play Championships at Village Links in Glen Ellyn.

Jacobsen, whose home course — White Pines in Bensenville — hosted the Chick Evans, defeated Stan Magnuson 6 and 3 in the first round at Village Links.

He followed that with a second round default win over Al Samas to advance further through the lower bracket. Third and fourth round play was contested on Tuesday with the championship round today at Village Links.

Samas moved into the second round by winning 4 and 3 over Jim Snyder. A family emergency forced him to withdraw.

Other second round winners were John Lynch 3 and 2 over Bob Bailey, Scott Webster one up over Bob Kramer, Merritt Cook Jr. 3 and 2 over Bob Mangan, Rick Van Der Sande 2 and 1 over Don Dray, Gus Kozina one up over Len Flocea, Bob Wertz 2 and 1 over Jim Waring and Ace Ellis one up over Russ Streeter.

Entries are pouring in as heavily as expected for the 13th annual Paddock Publications Tennis Tournament, suggesting that this might be the biggest Paddock tourney in history before entries close next Tuesday, Aug. 28.

The big event will be held Sept. 1-3 at several area courts, with Arlington High School serving as center.

There are 14 different categories for players of all ages, both male and female, and a total of more than 200 had entered as of early this week. The breakdown for number of entries in each division is as follows:

(Any age) — Men's singles 37, men's doubles 22, women's singles 12, women's doubles 17. (Junior vets, 35 and older) — Men's singles 18, Men's doubles 17. (Senior, 45 and older) — Men's singles nine, men's doubles three. (Girls 18 and younger) — Singles 12, doubles 14. (Boys 16-18) — Singles 12, doubles 12. (Junior boys, 15 and younger) — Singles 32, doubles 23.

The tourney is open to a vast number of all types of players, and it costs only $1 to enter. That will place each adult in one division and each child in two. This low entry fee is probably one of the reasons the tournament has grown so fast — like many other Paddock-sponsored local sports events — as well as the tremendous boom in tennis interest.

Starting times will be 8 a.m. for boys and girls, 9:00 for men, 10:00 for women and 2:00 for doubles.

The normal two-of-three-sets rule will apply with a nine-point tiebreaker to be used if a set is tied 6-6. News balls must be supplied by each player. No one may enter more than two events.

Entries should be addressed to Paddock Tennis, P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights 60006, and checks should be made payable to Paddock Tournaments. Remember, all entries must be received by next Tuesday.

Entry blanks will continue to appear in the Herald and are available at the main office at 217 W. Campbell, Arlington Heights.

Mel Timmons is tournament director and information on any aspect of the tourney can be obtained from him at 358-1992.

Gran, Evans top golf tournament

Two Palatine boys were winners Monday in the Inverness Country Club Caddie Tournament. Tom Gran shot an 87 to win the Junior Flight. John Evans beat brother Dick, 80-81, in a playoff to win the Senior Flight.

Four miscellaneous categories were also contested. Jeff Ruback, also Palatine, won the club throw by hurling his five-iron the farthest.

John Evans tied with Kurt Schneider, also Palatine, for the longest drive while Dick Evans won the blind bogey. Jack Oroway and Rob Cannon tied for closest-to-the-pin honors. Those boys are also from Palatine.

RECORD ROUND. Dave Horenberger of the American Can team that plays out of Palatine Hills set an 18-hole record Sunday when he fired a scratch 67 in the Paddock golf tourney at Thunderbird Country Club. Horenberger, who plays a 3-handicap, went out in 32 and came back in 35 for his 4-under-par round that nipped the former tourney record by one shot.

Paterno looked gift horse in the mouth—he's glad

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — This is the year that Joe Paterno could have laid the golden football. He didn't. He gave up a $1 million offer to coach the New England Patriots in order to keep his nest in Mt. Nittany, where he is now preparing for the 1973 college season.

Some considered him a wild-eyed, four-eyed Italian for declining such a deal, a deal that could have kept him in yachts and cashew nuts the rest of his life.

Immediately, all he got out of staying on as football coach at Penn State was a good night's sleep — one not filled with the agony of prodigious decision — and, soon, a flattering if quizzical offer to give the commencement speech at the University's graduation exercises.

"I thought it was crazy," said Paterno by telephone recently. "So did the president of the University, Dr. John Oswald. At least, he told me he thought so at first."

The recommendation for Paterno to be the speaker — a football coach; at such an august event — was made by senior students, those on the graduation committee, some of whom may have been in that basketball crowd on a night soon after Paterno's remarkable if impecunious decision.

During a Penn State home game, Paterno, high in the stands, got up to go to the men's room. Some students seated across the arena noticed him and began to applaud. Others looked to see what it was all about, saw Paterno wending his way down the aisles, and the ripple grew. There was a standing ovation by the time Paterno disappeared through the exit. Paterno wasn't sure whether to feel embarrassed or thrilled.

Paterno finally accepted the invitation to make the graduation address because, he said in his speech, "I realize that in a day when materialism is rampant many of you felt that my interest in doing other things besides making money has in some way helped you to reaffirm your ideal of a life of service, of dignity, and a life of meaning which goes beyond financial success."

Paterno had been offered several pro coaching jobs in the past. He has of course turned them all down. He says that he feels he is first an educator, second a football coach. In the pros, he says, football is a business. In college, it is an educational experience — the way he tries to handle it, which is often antithetical to the operations of many big-time football factories.

Being an educator, however, does not exclude excellence in head-rattling tactics. Paterno, in fact, has the winningest record of active major college coaches in the nation who have been coaching for five years or more.

His teams have been at the top or near the top of the nation in the polls. In 1969, when the graduating seniors were freshmen, the No. 1 ranking was very controversial. That year President Nixon conferred the top spot to Texas, which was undefeated. But so was Penn State. The Nittany Lion rosters were furious. And in his commencement speech, Paterno made wry reference to it. "I'd like to know, how could the President know so little about Watergate in 1973, and so much about college football in 1969." It brought a laugh from the crowd.

As teacher, Paterno believes he is as challenged and inspired and instructed by the students as he hopes he challenges and inspires and instructs them.

"They are always testing you to measure up, not to be hypocritical," says Paterno. "They are very anti-elite. When I was going to college (some 25 years ago) the students were impressed if your dad was a millionaire. Now I think they'd hold it against you."

"I often talk about doing the best job you can without care for material gain. And a lot of money is not one of my goals. So I wouldn't turn around — leave a place where I am happy, where I enjoy living, where I am challenged in my work, where I am doing okay financially (salary is about $30,000 a year) — and leave it for pure money. That would have been hypocritical, to others as well as myself. I did not forsake aspirations to stay here. I'm still doing the best job I know how, and I'm still committed to excellence."

Near the end of his commencement talk, Paterno touched on, of all non-football esoterica, love:

"We hope you have loved each other because a little bit of you is inside one another. . . . I cannot adequately describe to you the love that permeates a good football team — a love of one another. Perhaps as one of my players said 'we grow together in love — hating the coach.'"

Softball meet continues in Rolling Meadows

The Chicago Metropolitan American Softball Association 16-inch tournament has been rolling along with busy schedules every night at the Rolling Meadows Park District field, eight blocks south of Kirchoff Road on Owl Drive (two blocks east of route 53). The double-elimination tournament started with a field of 23 teams last week and will crown a champion this Saturday unless weather interferes with the schedule.

There have been some mild surprises but no shocks thus far. It is well-known that even though suburban 16-inch play has improved in quality recently, Chicago is still the capital of the nation in this sport.

And suburban teams have been failing by the wayside, confined to the sidelines with two losses. They include both Rolling Meadows entries, the hosting Raiders and Kemmerly Realty.

The only Herald area team still alive (one loss) is Olson's of Mount Prospect, which will play at 7 p.m. Wednesday against a Tuesday winner.

Meanwhile, two Chicago teams — defending champion Sobles and Jennies — have each absorbed an upset loss, but both are still definite threats to take it all.

But in the driver's seat, surprisingly enough, is a suburban outfit — the Blue Island Raiders. They're the only team without a loss thus far, having won the championship bracket, and now get to sit back and wait until Saturday to take on the survivor of the losers bracket.

If the Raiders (Blue Island) win their next game, scheduled at 7:30 Saturday, they will be champs. If they lose, one final game to decide it all will be played at 8:45.

There will be two games each Wednesday and Thursday nights, starting at 7:00 and 8:00. Wednesday's winners will meet in Thursday's first game, with the winner of that one taking on Jennie's in the next contest to determine the winner of the losers bracket and the Raiders' opponent.

The Raiders whipped Jennie's 16-8 Monday to win the championship bracket and put the heat on the Chicago group. The same thing had happened to Sobie's Saturday when it was stunned 19-7 by Nickel Bag of Tigra.

In other Monday action, Sobie's moved on in the losers bracket with a 16-8 conquest of Hawthorne and the Blue Island Americans gratefully chalked up a win without having to take the field, by forfeit over the Joliet Roadrunners.

Earlier games in the semi-finals saw the Blue Island Raiders slug Olson's 12-5 and Jennie's romp over Dundee 20-2. In the losers bracket Sobie's crushed Kemmerly 11-2, Blue Island beat Dist. 5 13-5, Oak Forest nipped the Blue Island Nationals 6-5, the Chicago Dwarfs whipped the Rolling Meadows Raiders 10-3, the Norridge Blues routed Oak Forest 15-6 and Nickel Bag overcame the Dwarfs 17-12. All losers in the losers bracket, of course, were eliminated.

In previous games Sunday, Olson's was an impressive 11-0 winner over Nickel Bag, the Raiders edged the Blues 7-6, Jennie's crushed Joliet 18-2 and Dundee got past Hawthorne 9-4.

Rolling Meadows Park District is hosting the tourney for the second straight year and Ken Sulula is tournament director.

Other placemen were Hank Haney of Deerfield, 76-70-146; Jim Orbon of Chicago, 71-77-148; and Doug Fort of Pekin, 77-72-149.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

L LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The obligatory finesse should be classed among elementary plays but it is doubtful if very many bridge players know it.

South is in a pretty sound four-spade contract. He has to lose a trick to the ace of clubs and barring a very bad trump break will only lose two trump tricks.

However, there is no harm making an extra trick if it can be scored and obligatory finesse will bring it in this time.

South wins the diamond in his own hand and leads a spade toward dummy's queen. It holds the trick and he leads a spade back. East plays either the 10 or jack. It doesn't matter which because South simply plays a low spade.

He has nothing to lose with this play. If West holds both missing trumps he is sure of two trump tricks. If East held the trump ace he would have used it to capture the queen.

Against the actual holding West must play the ace willynilly. Later on South picks up East's last trump; discards one club on a high heart and concedes a trick to the club ace.

What about three no-trump? Declarer would still try the obligatory finesse, but against a heart lead would have trouble collecting more than nine tricks and no chance to score 11.

Rain prediction gauges to be installed by MSD

The Metropolitan Sanitary District will install rain gauges in two Northwest Suburban locations to help predict the magnitude of rainstorms before they hit downtown Chicago.

The gauges — which will telemeter rainfall information to the MSD's waterways Control Dispatch center in Chicago — will be located at the Palatine Pumping Station on East Kenilworth Road and at Chicagoland Airport on Milwaukee Avenue north of Wheeling.

The sanitary district already has similar measuring devices at the North Side sewage treatment plant in Skokie, in Glenview and in Hanover Park, MSD supervising engineer William A. Eyre said.

Eyre explained that while the amount of rainfall that falls in the Northwest suburbs has no significant effect on the levels of the Chicago River and canal system through drainage, the measuring of rainfall here is important in predicting the intensity of a storm before it hits Chicago.

"The object is to give us warning; it's a forecasting device," Eyre said. He said that while weather forecasters can generally tell the MSD which direction a storm is coming from, "They can't tell us how much rain is coming."

Eyre said the gauges work by having a bucket that automatically empties out every time it is filled. Each time the bucket tips it is noted on equipment in the Chicago dispatch center indicating that 1/100th of an inch of rain has fallen, he said.

KNOWING HOW MUCH rain is coming enables the MSD to adjust levels in the Chicago river and channel system to avoid flooding areas with combined sewage and to prevent having to divert the polluted water into Lake Michigan and possibly taint the drinking water supply for the city and many suburban areas.

The MSD board last week approved advertising for bids on the gauges and transmitting equipment for the two Northwest suburban locations and for four other gauges in outlying suburban areas.

The MSD anticipates all six of the new gauges will cost $20,000. The work is expected to begin in October and be completed by next July 11.

CONTRACT BRIDGE YOUR GAME?

BID-N-BUDDY IS MY NAME

I'm a unique bidding aid for contract bridge. Based on the slide rule principle — only much simpler! I'll give you your opening — responding — opener rebid — and response rebid. All you have to do is count your points and read what I say. A special bonus is my LEAD-N-BUDDY section working on the same slide rule principle it shows you your opening leads for suit contracts leads against slams and no trump contracts — plus best, worst, and waiting leads. The amazing thing is my price for this wealth of information for just $1.00, you can pick me up at the Herald office, 217 W. Campbell Street, Chicago Heights, Illinois. If you want to use my coupon (below), and have me mailed I'm still only $1.00.

New water lines for W. Strong St. area planned

by LYNN ASINOF

An important argument in the recent W. Strong Street zoning case may soon be nullified by village plans to extend sewer and water lines through the entire W. Strong Street area.

When residents went to court last year over zoning for 41 six-flat apartments in their area, they challenged the village's claim that apartment development was the only way to bring water and sewer to the neighborhood.

The residents noted that water and sewer lines installed by developer Victor Smigel would not benefit a large portion of homeowners in the area.

Trustee Bill Hein announced Monday night that the village is considering plans to install lines in the sections that would not be improved by Smigel's development. The sections affected would include portions of Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh streets.

The project is part of an overall sewer and water program in the village.

Hein said tentative plans now call for a recapture agreement to be drawn up so that owners of vacant land in the area would pay the village part of the cost of the new sewer and water lines.

"WE WOULD ENTER into a recapture agreement with these vacant lots," he said. "Anyone with an existing home in the area would have to pay for their service and their tap-on. They would have to bear the cost of going from their home to the line with their service line."

Work on the project would be financed through a joint-bidding arrangement between the village and Smigel. Hein said specifications for the project would be drawn up, and the village would then go for bid. He said Smigel would pay for his portion of the work with the village picking up the rest of the tab.

Bill Bieber, director of building and zoning, estimated that Smigel's portion would cover 60 to 70 per cent of the cost. No estimates were given on the cost of the project.

Residents are now in the process of appealing the April court decision which upheld the rezoning of the W. Strong Street area for apartments. Attorney John M. Burko, representing the residents, said he did not want to comment on how the new village proposal would affect the case until he talked with his clients.

"It really belies their theory that the only way to put it (sewer and water) in is to bring in six-flats," he said. "If they had done this a couple of years ago, it would have been a lot easier on everybody."

Maureen Pitt, 294 W. Strong St., one of the residents involved in the suit, said she was not surprised by the village plans. She said she had heard talk of installing new water and sewer throughout the area, but was not overly enthusiastic about the project.

"THE SEWER and water is not our whole argument," she said. "The flooding problem has much to do with it. How are you going to fix that, village hall?"

Mrs. Pitt said she did not want to comment further until she talked with the other homeowners involved in the suit. "We will have a statement," she added. "Our attorney will make our statement in time."

Plans for the new water and sewer lines also met some opposition from Trustee Ron Bruhn, who said he would like the homeowners to pay part of the cost of the new utilities.

"My biggest worry in this whole dog-gone mess is we are setting precedents," he said. Bruhn said he thought other areas annexed into the village might use the Strong Street case to demand sewer and water service.

"It's a political deal, that's all it is," he said.

Bruhn said that he would be in agreement with the plans if homeowners in the Extensive sewer, water work planned

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling officials are considering a comprehensive program of sewer and water main work throughout the village.

Trustee Bill Hein Monday night outlined five possible areas for the village to consider the installation of new utilities. Three of the projects would provide village residents with utility service that they do not currently have.

The first project would extend village water mains on Wolf Road from just south of Dundee Road to Highland Avenue. Hein explained that residents in this area are currently getting their water from wells.

"Talking to the people in that area for the past couple of years, they've been very concerned about it," he said. Hein said there have been some problems with shallow wells and seepage.

According to Hein, the project will cost an estimated $11,000. He said that by connecting the water main to Highland Avenue, the village would improve its water by making an extra loop in its system.

RESIDENTS ALONG Wolf Road are already hooked into sanitary sewer service.

The second project would extend village water mains from Schoenbeck Road down Lee Street. The street is not currently hooked into either sewer or water lines. Village officials, however, said they could not plan to extend sanitary sewer lines into the area because of problems with the Anthony Road sewer.

Hein also proposed extending water and sewer lines into the Strong Street area to provide utility service to those areas that will not be developed by Victor Smigel. The developer is planning to bring utilities into the area for his proposed 41 six-flat apartment buildings. Hein said the village could work in conjunction with Smigel to bring water and sewer to the remaining parts of the Strong Street area.

The village is also developing plans to relocate the sanitary sewer system on Mercantile Court which services the entire Dunhurst area. The sewer currently runs across private property.

ALTHOUGH THE sewer line was installed in the 1950s, there is no recorded easement granted the village for the sewer. Village officials said they therefore must relocate the line. The estimated cost of the project is $10,000.

Finally, Hein proposed that the village might investigate extending its water mains west from Elmhurst Road on Hintz Road. He said this would improve the water pressure in the Orchard Lakes area on Sherwood Avenue.

Strong Street area paid a slightly higher tap-on fee to cover some of the cost of the new lines.

TRUSTEE JOHN KOEPPEN favored the project, saying he voted for Smigel's apartment project so that sewer and water would be brought into the area.

Three firemen hurt in crash

Three Wheeling firemen were slightly injured Monday afternoon when their vehicle was struck by an oncoming car while responding to a fire call in Prospect Heights.

Assistant Chief Lloyd Kelm and firefighters Thomas Coney and Thomas Fontaine were in the fire department's station wagon heading south on Wheeling Road when struck by an eastbound car on Palatine Road. Both the siren and lights were going when the station wagon was struck.

Andrew Leonard Jr., 1710 Park Dr.,

WORK ON THE WHEELING Road extension is progressing well, with most of the paving already completed on the new section of road. Workmen are now installing median strips at the intersection where Wheeling Road will meet Dundee Road. When completed, the new road will provide a new north-south route through the village by connecting with McHenry Road. Traffic in the area is also expected to be improved by a deceleration lane being installed at the Dundee Road entrance to Lynn Plaza shopping center.

Come from throughout state for funeral

Police to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhineland, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Lends teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg

Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBeau SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Huron Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

Bob Ross elected park board president

Wheeling Park Commissioner Bob Ross was elected president of the park board last week, replacing former president, Gus Nizzi.

Nizzi resigned from the board two months ago to accept a position in the Neenah, Wis. school system.

Ross will serve as president of the board until next May. He presently also heads the finance committee of the board and will probably retain that position.

The board will appoint a new commissioner to fill Nizzi's vacant seat. Applications from interested park district residents, in the form of a letter to the board, should be submitted by Sept. 4 to the park district office at Heritage Park, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

THE BOARD WILL review the applications and interview candidates at the Sept. 6 meeting. Interviews will be scheduled at 15-minute intervals beginning at 7 p.m.

The commissioners will vote to appoint the fifth member of the board following the interviews only if the entire board is present. If one of the commissioners is absent, the appointment will be delayed until he has had a chance to review the taped interviews.

So far, only two qualified candidates have submitted applications for the position. They are Frank Schnaltmann, 51 George Rd. and John Bailey, 949 Wilshire Dr. Another resident who lives outside the district applied for the seat, but is ineligible because commissioners must live within park district boundaries.

The board will decide whether to name the commissioner to serve until the next park board election in 1975 or to complete Nizzi's term that expires in 1977.

Late registration set Wednesday at St. Joseph

Late registration for St. Joseph the Worker School, in Wheeling, will be conducted next Wednesday, Aug. 29, from 10 a.m. to noon, in the school hall.

All parents who want to enroll their children for the upcoming school year, but who did not do so last spring, may enroll children at the late registration, according to Principal John Topper.

Along with late registration, the school also will sponsor a book exchange and a uniform purchase next Wednesday.

The book exchange will provide an opportunity for all students to purchase some of their textbooks used. At the uniform purchase, students who have already ordered uniforms may pick them up. Students who have not ordered uniforms may do so at that time.

Tuition for the school year will be $200 for one child, $250 for two children, $300 for three children, and an additional $25 per child for families with more than three children enrolled.

Parents interested in arranging for bus service for their children also may do so on the late registration day, through the school office, Topper said.

Classes for all students begin Tuesday, Sept. 4, from 8:45 to 11:50 a.m. The first full day of classes will be Sept. 5.

Nickel a quart hike?

Moo-ve over beef—
milk's going up

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Lier, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Lier predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Lier attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Lier put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.50 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Lier said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

Park district water

The Wheeling Park District will sponsor its first annual water carnival Saturday at Community Outdoor Pool.

Special events, including a greased watermelon contest, relay races, a dive-for-dough and other games are planned. Children will be divided up to compete by age groups.

Prizes from the pool concession stand will be awarded to the winners in each contest.

EXPLOSIVE SOCCER games were just one of the many activities featured at the Canstater Volksfest this past weekend in Buffalo Grove. The fest, conducted at the Schwaben Soccer Center, is a German-American celebration similar to the traditional Oktoberfest. More than 10,000 persons participated in the two-day festival, held in Buffalo Grove for the first time this year.

Park football weigh-ins set for Saturday

Weigh-ins for participants in the Wheeling Park District Junior Tackle Football League will be Saturday at the Heritage Park building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Any boy in Wheeling, Prospect Heights or Buffalo Grove in grades six through eight may still register at the weigh-in to take part in the league. The fee is $15.

Prospect Heights boys will weigh-in between 9 and 10 a.m., Buffalo Grove boys between 10 and 11 a.m. and Wheeling boys between 11 a.m. and noon.

The park district has purchased 20 sets of football helmets and shoulder pads that may be rented at a cost of $5 per item. They will be available on a first come first served basis at the weigh-in.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the All America Shop will be at the weigh-in to sell regulation football pants.

To date, 38 boys from Wheeling and about 15 from Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights have registered for the league that will be divided into six teams. The teams will compete against each other.

The first practice is Monday and will be conducted Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays throughout the season. The first game is scheduled for Sept. 15.

Every boy in the league will be required to practice one week without football equipment before he will be allowed to put on shoulder pads and begin practicing to play in a game.

What's best for 'whose' children?

by MARY HOULIHAN
A News Analysis

"What's best for the children?" All at River Trails Dist. 16 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart" the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocese property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 26 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth. That's our whole philosophy, to get Maryville involved in the community. I think it's much healthier for the children and for the community."

AS FOR PARENTS' worries that students from the special education facility will have problems in being on the same campus with students from the junior high school, Father Smyth foresees no great difficulties. They're mixing now (in the regular district schools)," he said, so they're really worrying about nothing. I personally can't see any real problems outside of the two I would mention of transportation and communication — that is, that Maryville would be physically closer."

Retzlaff agrees with Smyth in his assessment of potential problems at the junior high school site. I feel up until recently, there's been a very healthy, positive acceptance of our educating the Maryville students in the district," Retzlaff said.

When the Maryville children were first integrated into the schools in the district outside River Road five years ago, it was more of a novelty," Retzlaff explained. "They said to their friends, 'here, my kid has a black kid in his room.' It wasn't as if they were living next door."

"I feel there is throughout the public now a sort of fear of the unknown," Retzlaff said. "I do not feel as if most of the public has had that much contact with the students from Maryville. But I feel obliged to say these youngsters are human beings with some basic human needs that need to be satisfied in all youngsters."

Tree recycling plant to be built 'within a year'

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

A new tree recycling plant east of Wheeling will be built, "probably within the year," according to Chief Forester Samuel Gabriel of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The Cook County Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners voted Monday to award a contract for the construction of the plant, he said.

Plans for the plant have been under way for several months. However, the forest preserve district had postponed awarding a final contract until it received word on a state bill which might have allowed for open burning of area trees once again.

THE DISTRICT had feared that if open burning of trees were permitted the new plant might be unnecessary. However, last week Gov. Daniel Walker vetoed the bill in question.

The recycling plant is intended as a solution to a long-standing problem with diseased tree disposal in the area.

Before the 1971 ban on open tree burning, many Northwest suburbs, along with private firms, had burned diseased trees at the district site where the plant will be located. Since the ban most trees have been sent to sanitary landfills. However, owners of the landfills are reluctant to accept diseased trees, because of the space they take up.

The new plant should eliminate this problem. Plant equipment will strip of diseased portions of the trees, such as the bark, leaving the rest of the wood usable for commercial purposes. Bark and other non-usable wood will be chipped up.

UNDER THE TERMS of the contract which the board approved, the Rossi Contracting Co. will be licensed to build and operate the recycling plant. The company will assume all plant construction costs, which should be between $125,000 and $185,000, according to James Tyndall, district assistant general superintendent.

Thus the company will own the plant equipment, although the forest preserve will retain ownership of the site.

Prior to the opening of the new plant, the district will put out a letter to all previous users of the burning site, Tyndall said. The letter will detail the plant services and costs for using it, which have not been determined at this time.

"We're hoping that the same people who used the burning site previously will use the new plant," Gabriel said.

According to Gabriel, preliminary electrical work on the plant has begun already. The plant should be ready for use within a few months, he said.

Uniforms ready for NJROTC

Wheeling High School Naval Junior ROTC (NJROTC) Cadets may pick up uniforms for the 1973-74 school year from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. today through Friday at the school.

There are openings in the first year NJROTC classes for girls and boys, according to Capt. Adrian Lorentson, U.S. Navy (Retired), naval science instructor.

Lorentson said students from outside High School Dist. 214 are eligible to enroll in the classes provided that transportation can be arranged.

Lorentson will be available to discuss the NJROTC program during registration that is being conducted this week at the school.

The NJROTC Drill Team will begin practice at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 20. This is a voluntary extracurricular activity open to any NJROTC cadet.

Any cadet who is interested in trying out for the drill team should attend the first practice.

The drill team is commanded by Cadet Lt. Kenneth May of Buffalo Grove, a senior at Wheeling High School. The team is coached by Gunnery Sgt. David Turner, the assistant naval science instructor.

Aldermen split over costs

Council awaits committee review on new city hall

by STEVE BROWN

Despite a great deal of support, plans for the proposed Des Plaines City Hall were sidetracked Monday night.

The city council was expected to act on revised construction bids totaling $1,622,112, but Ald. Gerald J. Meyer (7th) asked the action be deferred until another committee meeting could be held to discuss the project.

The future of the often altered six-story facility will be reviewed by the city's building, grounds and parking lot committee on Aug. 31.

Several councilmen, headed by Ald. Charles Bolek (3rd), Ald. Carmen Sarto (8th) and Meyer argued that the city should make an effort to keep the price tag for the building closer to the $1.4 million estimated costs.

The trio was not dissuaded by arguments advanced by several other aldermen during a 30 minute debate.

ALTHOUGH SEVERAL members of the council suggested that the top two floors be eliminated, Kenneth Holmes of the architectural firm of Holmes and Fox said reduction in size may not result in any savings.

Holmes said that the Frederick Quinn Construction Co., the apparent low bidder, would only deduct about $33,000 if the top two floors are eliminated.

Eliminating the floors would normally reduce cost by about $80,000 to $100,000 per floor, Holmes said. "In this case, you may be paying the same price for a four story building as you now have for a six story building," he explained.

The building committee had managed to trim about $45,000 from the original bids on the building, but the reduction did not seem to satisfy some of the aldermen.

Bolek suggested that the city might try to rebid the city hall as a four story building before rejecting the present bids in an effort to get a cost comparison. But City Atty. Robert Dileonardi said that such action would not be legal.

BOLEK ALSO argued that the city should do more to save within the original estimate for the building.

"Here we have the first time that the city can sell bonds without a referendum,

More committee work on new city hall pointless: mayor

"Naturally I am displeased, and I do not know what the implications of this delay might be," said Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel.

The mayor, speaking during his weekly press conference yesterday, voiced his sentiments about the city council's lack of action Monday in awarding a contract for the proposed six-story city hall building.

The council deferred action on the $1.6 million facility until after an Aug. 31 committee meeting to study possible changes in the building designed to cut the cost.

While not naming any single alderman, Behrel said he did not feel additional committee session on the project would accomplish anything.

"We have had a long debate on this, already," he said. Two committee sessions were held last week to discuss bids.

THE MAYOR SAID the delay probably would not affect the city's plans to sell bonds for the building.

He was also critical of suggestions to reduce the height of the building by two stories.

"This would leave us with the same amount of space we have now, there would be no room for expansion," he explained, adding that if the proponents of the four story building prevail the city might not be able to expand services in the future.

He added that the cost of adding floors in the future would certainly be higher than present construction costs.

The city will probably advertise bond bids for the building next month. He estimated the city would probably sell about $2 million bonds to cover cost of the building, improvements to the parking lot and various consulting fees.

When the city hall building is completed, construction will begin on a new police station.

Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) also supported accepting the bids for the city hall.

"A lot of hard thought went into the sizing and shape of this building and we are only 14 per cent over the estimate, we are really not that far off," he said.

IT WAS ALSO noted that the original $1.4 million estimate for the building was probably too conservative.

"If we would have had an estimate for $1.8 million a year ago then we would not be going through this struggle," Ald. Richard Ward (8th).

Ald. Joseph Szabo (1st) said that a comparison of other buildings shows that the estimated $35 per square foot is not a bad price for the building.

Ald. George Olen (2nd) noted that if the building size was reduced, police service might be disrupted. The city plans to move the police department into the two unoccupied floors of the city hall until a new police station can be built.

A recommendation on the awarding of bids is expected at the council's next meeting.

Two win awards at NIU

Two Des Plaines students recently were honored at Northern Illinois University's College of Business awards banquet. William Locke, 1382 Phoenix Dr., received a real estate award from the college finance department and Jackie Nowak, 2787 Rusty Dr., was given the membership award by the information systems department.

GROUNDWORK IS finally underway for the controversial Wolf Road sidewalk between Rand and Central roads. After a few years of protesting and petitioning, parents can now test their case. The sidewalk will be ready for the opening day of school.

After a year of hassles

Wolf Road walk ready for school

A sidewalk along Wolf Rd. between Central and Rand roads is finally under construction and will be ready for the beginning of the school year.

After a year of parents protesting, aldermen arguing, and the city council changing policy on funding, children who attend Cumberland and Chippewa schools will now have more than 6,000 feet of sidewalk to insure a safe route to school.

Estimated cost of the project is $32,251. Homeowners with property along the road will pay about $21,392 of the estimated cost; the city will pay the balance.

A GRAVEL path was laid last winter along the east side of the road. The cost for the gravel sidewalk was about $6,977, City Engr. Robert Bowen said at a city council meeting December 4, 1972.

Bowen said the winter weather wouldn't allow for a fill to be put down on the west side of the road, where the sidewalk is being put in now, so a gravel walk was laid down for an immediate safety precaution.

What will happen to the gravel sidewalk? Bowen said if the public works crews find the time, they might be able to salvage the gravel, and use it for another job. "You can't always look at it from dollar standpoint. The children's safety was involved."

Northwestern grad Bouril is appointed city attorney

Des Plaines officials approved the appointment of a 25-year-old Northwestern University graduate to the position of city attorney Monday.

The city council named James Bouril to fill the newly created position. He will join the city on Aug. 27.

Bouril completed his undergraduate work at Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn. He attended law school at Northwestern.

He was a partner in the law firm of Zak and Bouril in Chicago and has been associated with Ancel, Glink, Diamond and Murphy, another Chicago firm which specializes in municipal law.

Mayor Herbert Behrel said that Bouril was among 19 applicants for the position. He will be paid $15,000 a year.

Bouril, who currently resides in Chicago, said he plans to move to Des Plaines in the near future.

The mayor explained that the city's current attorney, Robert Dileonardi, will be retained as a special consultant and represent the city in any court action.

Did they deserve a break that day?

Two youths were arrested Monday night after a melee in a Golf Road parking lot, which involved some 50 teenagers and several Des Plaines police officers, according to reports.

Only minor injuries were reported in the brief scuffle but police said the two arrested youths had to be forcibly subdued after one had allegedly struck Des Plaines Patrolman Wendell Whitted.

Charged with public intoxication and battery was Michael Vivado, 17, of 2418 Cedar Ln., Des Plaines. He was being held on $1,000 bond yesterday by police. The other youth, George Bayer, 19, 1229 Belmont, Arlington Heights, was charged with disorderly conduct. Bayer was later released on $25 bond.

The fracas began about 10:45 p.m. when Whitted and patrolman Jack Muhs tried to disperse a large group of youths who had congregated in a parking lot near the McDonald's Restaurant, 725 Golf Rd., according to Des Plaines police.

MUHS TOLD THE Herald yesterday the youths got into their cars and left but returned to the lot about 30 seconds later with an even larger group and began yelling obscenities at them.

The two officers radioed for help and according to reports, Vivado struck Whitted during a confrontation with the youths.

Police said no one involved in the incident required hospital treatment.

Vivado and Bayer will appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept. 27.

Sgt. Robert Ornberg said yesterday police patrols in the area will probably be increased.

Jr. high opening delayed?

by BOB GALLAS

With the opening of school just two weeks away there is still some doubt whether Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines will be ready.

Although school officials are fairly confident the new junior high will be completed on time the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education heard nothing but bad news from building contractor Al Berg and architect Grant Terrell at its regular meeting Monday night.

Terrell cited continuing problems, lack of manpower at the site and the lack of certain construction materials. The fire alarm system, a must if the building is to be occupied, was to be finished yesterday, according to Terrell. But flaws in the system have popped up and it won't be ready until tomorrow at the earliest, he said.

SCHOOL SUPT. James Erviti expressed his concern for the safety of the children in school since workmen will be working on the east section of the building long after school starts. That section contains the gymnasium and auditorium.

Erviti questioned Berg about barriers that would keep children out of the construction area but not violate fire safety codes. Berg assured Erviti that such barriers would be no problem.

Other problems brought up by Terrell included the lack of lockers and some tile in the locker room area. It was uncertain if those materials will be in on time for school opening.

Despite those problems, the academic or west portion of the building is all but complete. At the meeting, the board voted 4-2 for a reduction of retention of the 10 per cent of the building's purchase price, which is normally held by the owner until the building is more than 90 per cent complete. The retention was reduced to 5 per cent.

AT THAT TIME, the owner, at his option, can pay up to 5 per cent of the retention. According to Assistant Supt. Arthur Perry, about $120,000 was being held. "The money is usually held as an incentive for the contractor to complete the job," Perry said.

The board also voted to reduce the retention by 5 per cent for the building's plumbing subcontractor, Town and Country Plumbing.

There was some discussion among board members on whether or not they should reduce the money being held. Board member Al Domanico, one of the members for the reduction, stressed the need for a "spirit of cooperation" to help speed completion of the building.

THE BOARD PLANS to meet sometime within the next two weeks to informally inspect the school.

According to Perry, seven custodians are working at the school, setting up desks and other materials so things should be ready on time.

Burglars enter home, flee with $130

Burglars forced their way into the home of a local resident Saturday and stole $130 cash, said Des Plaines police.

Domenica Riccetti, 2652 Rusty Dr., told police she was awakened by her barking dog about 4 a.m. Saturday but saw no one in the house upon investigating.

She discovered the theft the next morning and noticed a door on her patio had been forced open, said police.

Burglars had also tried to break into the house of Nick Cozzi, 2671 Rusty Dr., early Saturday but were unable to gain entry, said police.

Cozzi told police he noticed pry marks on a door.

No use crying over spilled—or costlier—milk

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow. Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Lier, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Lier predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Lier attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Lier put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Lier said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

Robber takes drugs, ring in pharmacy theft

A north side Des Plaines pharmacy was held up Monday night by a gunman who wore a nylon stocking over his head and tied up a pharmacist and customer before fleeing with two bottles of an unidentified drug, police said.

According to police reports, the robber entered the Cumberland Pharmacy, 87 N. Broadway about 8:30 p.m., produced an automatic pistol and demanded the drugs.

The robber, who demanded no cash tied up the pharmacist, Frank Altmaier, and the customer, who police refused to identify. Police also said the bandit stole a ring the customer was wearing.

The robber fled southbound from the store on foot, according to police.

The gunman was described as about five feet 10 inches tall, 170 pounds, wearing a plaid shirt and blue jeans.

Police said one piece of the stocking mask was later recovered in a washroom; another piece was found in a waste can outside the store.

Another holdup at the Cumberland Pharmacy occurred early last May when two gun-wielding bandits forced a pharmacist to hand over $70 in cash and an undetermined amount of drugs.

The pharmacist, John McAloon, was also tied up in that holdup.

Lt. Leo Altano said yesterday police have not yet established a connection between the two robberies.

The city's beautification committee will meet at 8:30 p.m. Monday to discuss the planting of trees in the city.

CHILDREN AT MARYVILLE Academy find a learning environment, even though they are hampered by poor and outdated school conditions. The children became a concern of River Trails Dist. 26 in 1968 when the academy could no longer provide an education for them. Controversy has clouded the latest efforts to select a site for a new, well-equipped facility to replace the aging and unsafe River Road school.

What's best for 'whose' children?

Maryville site under parents' attack

by MARY HOULIHAN
A News Analyst

"What's best for the children?"

All at River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

"Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart" the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocese property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Police from entire state to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhinelander, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond. Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 39, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totalling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY was found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

LIVELY JUNIOR HIGH School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village, is one of two Dist. 59 schools to be named after Centex Corp. officials. The other, large, was named after Ira Rupley, who founded Centex.

Naming of schools no simple chore

by BOB GALLAS

Naming of schools in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is a lesson in local geography, history and philosophy, with a little confusion thrown in — like a junior Junior High or a school with eight possible names.

Luther Burbank, Robert Millikan, Eli Whitney, Alfred Whitehead, Jane Addams, and Waycinden were all suggested names for what was once Herzog School in Des Plaines when the school was to be renamed. After several weeks of suggestions, discussion and more suggestions, Dist. 59 board members finally settled on Albert Einstein, the great physicist.

Naming the first schools in Dist. 59 was no problem. The schools were named after the streets on which they were located, such as Brentwood School in Des Plaines, Dempster Junior High in Mount Prospect or Clearmont, Grove, and Ridge Schools in Elk Grove Village.

Schools were also named after the subdivisions or areas where they were located, such as Devonshire and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines.

Forest View School in Mount Prospect got its name from the school at the site of the Dist. 59 Administrative Center in Arlington Heights. When the old school was closed, public sentiment clamored for the new school in Mount Prospect to have the Forest View name.

SALT CREEK School in Elk Grove Village obviously got its name from Salt Creek, which runs through the village and comes within a few blocks of the school.

Things started becoming more complicated in naming schools about 10 years ago, when the Dist. 59 board adopted a policy of naming schools after individuals who made contributions to society.

The reasoning behind that thinking, according to past board meeting minutes, was that "naming the schools after individuals who have made contributions to our society could possibly inspire children to pattern their lives after those famous and successful people and . . . if only one child were so inspired, the efforts of the board would be rewarded."

Two schools in the district have been named after Centex Corp. officials. In fact, the oldest school in Dist. 59, built in 1957, was named after the founder of Centex, Ira Rupley.

Rupley, who died in 1960 at the age of 80, was instrumental in getting the land on which the school was built. He attended the formal dedication of the school in November of 1957. He was the only living person to have a Dist. 59 school named after him.

Lively Junior High in Elk Grove Village was also named for a Centex official, Thomas Lively, who was president of Centex when he died in 1965 at the age of 45.

Grant Wood School was the first of a long line of schools to be named after persons who made significant contributions to society. Wood was an American painter who died in 1942.

He helped the development of regional art centers to encourage native art in America. Famous for his Midwestern scenes, his most famous painting was "American Gothic."

ROBERT FROST School in Mount

Prospect was originally called Elk Ridge Villa School. The name was changed to that of the famous American poet in 1964 when the trend toward schools named after people had just begun in the district.

Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village got its name from an American educator who died in 1887. A professor of

Devon-53 opponents to face trustees

by FRED GACA

When the village board of trustees discusses the proposed Devon-53 housing project, Donald Meyer and his associates will be there to express their opinions.

Meyer, 1370 Berkshire Ln., is the spokesman for a citizens group opposed to the 267-acre, 13,000 population project. The group submitted a petition with more than 1,300 names demanding that acceptance of the development be put to a village referendum.

The petition was presented at one of the two public hearings on the project conducted by the village plan commission. About 300 persons attended the hearing in May, with 75 attending in June. Many of them were members of the citizens group.

Since the hearings, few if any people have attended plan commission meetings on Devon-53.

"We've been observing what's going on," said Meyer, "but we have stopped harassing them (the plan commission) and are letting them finish their work."

The commission recently finished the review of evidence and testimony from the hearings on the project. On Sept. 8, the group will meet to draft a preliminary recommendation. The final recommendation will be approved at the commission's Sept. 20 meeting.

Commission members have declined to say what they will recommend on the requested annexation of the project. During their review, however, the commission found the project does not meet any of its standards regarding traffic congestion, density, construction on the flood plain, open space requirements and other points.

The commission's recommendation will be given to the village board for a final decision. The board is not obligated to follow the commission's recommendation.

MEYER SAID, "We expect them (the commission) to reject the plan." He said the group would appear before the village board when the recommendation is presented from the commission.

Meyer said he hopes the board follows the recommendation he expects from the plan commission — to reject annexation of the project.

Devon-53 is a proposed project of single-family homes, quadrangles, five and 12-story apartments and commercial business. The project would be built in three large sections near the intersection of Ill. Rte. 53 and Devon Avenue.

Most of the site is in unincorporated land bordering the village. The developers are requesting zoning changes and annexation for the project.

The developers have threatened to build the project under county zoning if the village refuses to annex the land.

If necessary, however, Meyer said his group is prepared to fight the development in court.

"We have been told it would be an expensive undertaking (fighting in court), at least $5,000," he said. "The people, especially those west of Rte. 53, are ready to organize block captains to solicit contributions."

THE GROUP HAD considered retaining Frederic Floberg, an attorney retained by the plan commission to represent the village in the public hearings. Under Floberg's questioning, many of the consultants hired by the commission outlined the undesirable points of the project.

According to Meyer, Floberg said he was not sure if he could represent the group since he was still being retained by the village. He gave the group the names of other attorneys to contact.

"The village should fight for us, using our tax money," said Meyer. "It would be a shame if we have to spend our funds beyond what our taxes are to defend ourselves."

Schools to use breakable materials in new windows

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 School Board, in somewhat of a surprise move at its meeting Monday night, voted to again change materials for window replacement at the district's 22 buildings.

The board voted 5-1 to return to using an acrylic window material that should save the district about $3,000 to $5,000 in window replacement costs during the next year, according to Adolph M. Danta, director of buildings and grounds.

Although the acrylic material is about half as expensive as the polycarbonate material the board decided to use in school windows last year, it is not as strong, according to Danta.

THE POLYCARBONITE material used last year was unbreakable, while the acrylic material breaks as easily as glass.

According to Danta, some polycarbonate material will continue to be used in last year was unbreakable, while the acrylic material breaks as easily as glass.

According to Danta, some polycarbonate material will continue to be used in limited areas where breakage is high.

In other action, the board accepted a bid for the landscaping of Friendship School in the amount of $24,275. The bid was from Old Mill Flower and Garden Center of Lake Zurich. Work on the landscaping should begin in about a week, according to school officials.

The board also approved a contract with Fluid Engineering Services for testing and balancing of air flow through Friendship.

The bonding company for the job's original contractor, reportedly went bankrupt, declined to take over the job. The new contract is for the same amount as the old one, $4,400.

Village truck law hard on some local van owners

by FRED GACA

A village ordinance is meant to make life easier for most residents, but in some cases it can mean six miles of inconvenience.

The ordinance prohibiting trucks on boulevards is one of those protect-some-hardship-for-others rules.

Robert Wing uses a van truck to drive between his home, 120 Essex, and his business, Wing Heating and Air Conditioning, 1429 Tonne Rd. Since Devon Avenue and Arlington Heights Road are now under construction, Wing must either break the law and drive on the boulevards or drive about six miles out of his way to and from work.

Charles Sohn of Elk Grove Sheet Metal Co. also uses a van to and from work. He avoids the boulevards, and uses village side streets to get around.

Both these men feel the truck ordinance is unfair, especially since they live and work in the village and their van trucks are lighter than some cars, camper trucks or school buses that can use boulevards.

THE VILLAGE ordinance considers a truck a commercial vehicle with a commercial license plate. Unless the driver has to stop on the boulevard to make a delivery, the truck may not use the boulevard as a through street.

Wing called the ordinance "unjust and unfair." He said he received one warning ticket for driving on the boulevards.

He complained to the Association of Industry and Commerce and also told police he would fight any ticket in court. He said that since he got the warning ticket police have not stopped him when he was driving on the boulevard.

Sohn said he uses his van "all of the time," in place of a second car. "When my wife has the car, I can't even take my kids to the library because I can't drive the van on the boulevard," he said.

"It's worse now that Arlington Heights Road and Devon are under construction," said Sohn.

VILLAGE PRESIDENT Charles Zettek

said trucks were prohibited from using Elk Grove or Kennedy Boulevards for several reasons. Among these was to discourage trucks because the streets go through a residential area with numerous homes, schools, churches and parks.

Zettek said the boulevards are heavily used by autos. Permitting heavyweight trucks would increase maintenance work.

"I just feel sorry for them (residents wanting to use the boulevards with trucks), but they're not going to use the boulevards," said Zettek.

He said he could understand the hardship or inconvenience the ordinance caused some individuals, but "projected against the ultimate good of the village," he said the ordinance would have to remain.

According to Zettek, the village did grant permission to use the boulevards on the basis of truck weight or purpose. He said the exceptions soon became so numerous the ordinance was not being enforced by the police. The village board then decided to prohibit all trucks from using the boulevards, regardless of weight.

The ordinance will remain, and Wing, Sohn and others who share their problem must "keep on trucking" — but not on the boulevards.

Nickel a quart hike?

Moo-ve over beef— milk's going up

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boost in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Lier, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Lier predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Lier attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Lier put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

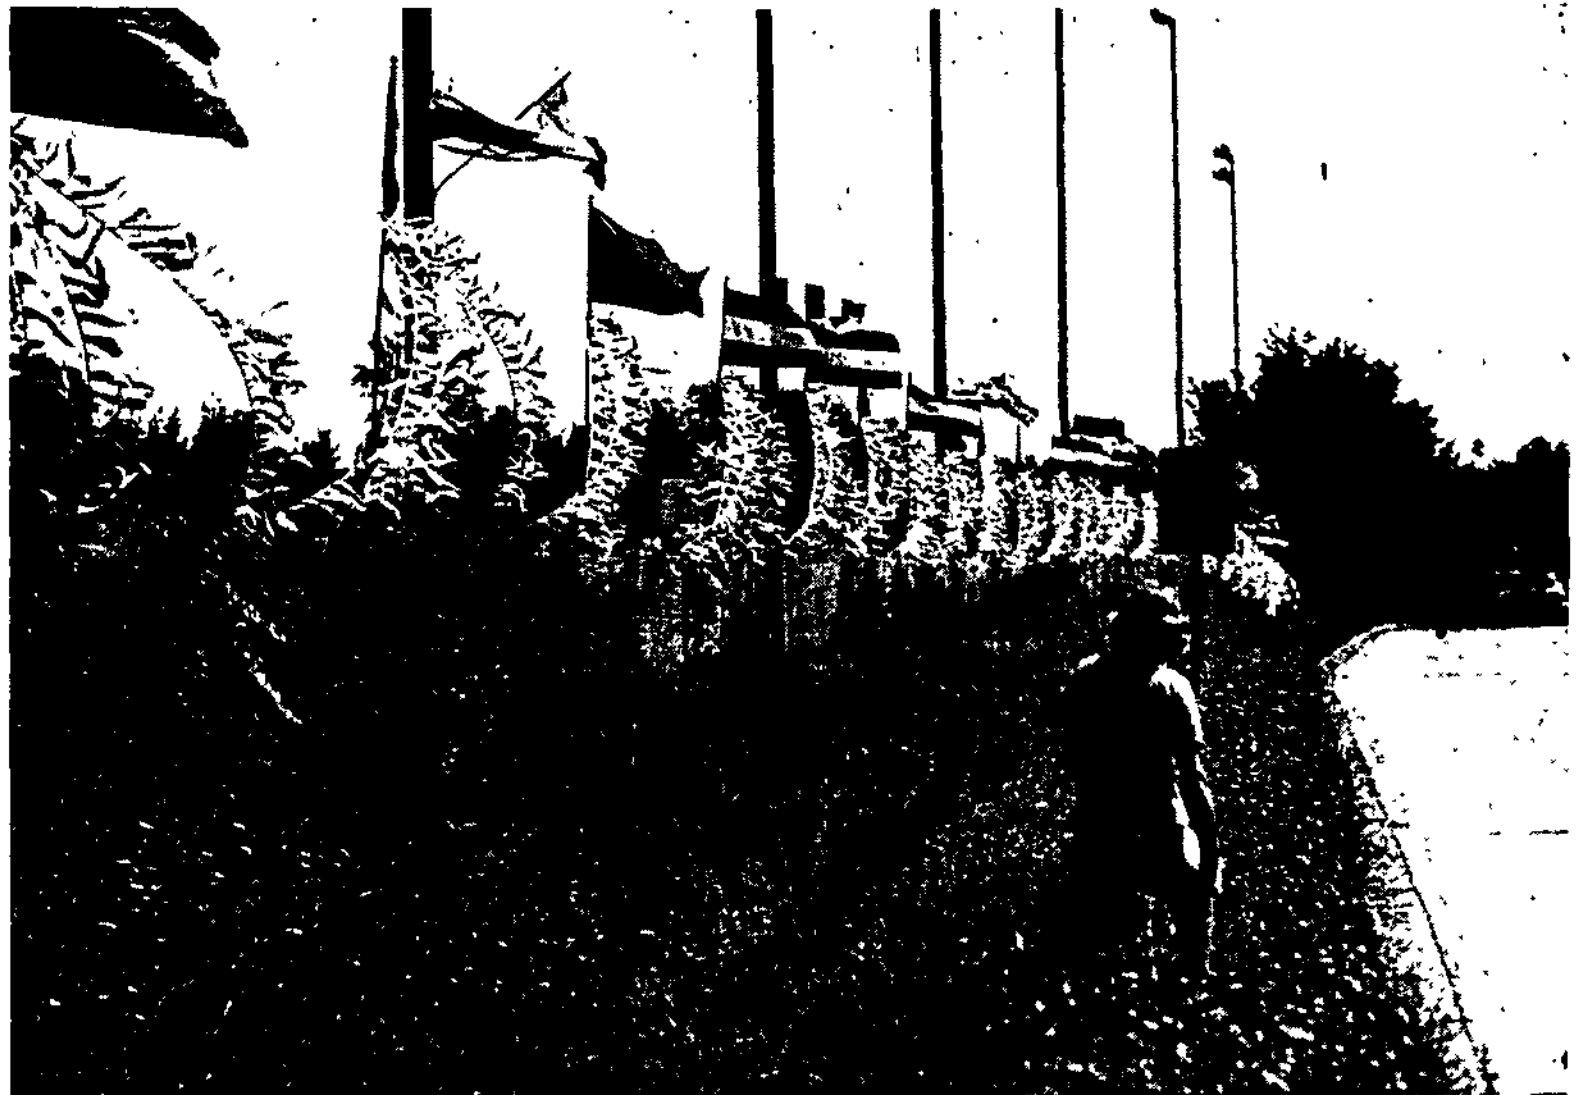

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Lier said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

FLAGS FLUTTERING along Euclid Avenue signal the advance of the Future of America Fair at Arlington Park Race Track. The 450-acre track site will come to life for 11-days of rides, games, shows and exhibitions starting Friday. The Future of America Fair is being promoted by Madison Square Garden Corp. as a new concept in fair-style entertainment. The fair's director says he expects more than half a million people to visit Arlington Park during the course of the event.

Bah! Humbert! Honesty IS best policy

Tommy Humbert's honesty is going to bring him more than $10 in rewards.

Tommy, 9, of 5 Wilwood Dr., found a $20 bill in a cash envelope from the Bank of Elk Grove a few blocks from the bank. His father told him to return the money to the bank.

When Tommy returned the money, bank officials knew exactly where it had come from. On Aug. 13, Wendy Jenkins was working as a teller in the drive-in window. It was a windy day and a breeze blew some money away from the window. All but $20 was recovered. The bill Tommy returned to the bank was the one that could not be found.

The bank is giving Tommy a $10 savings account and Miss Jenkins is giving him a coin from her coin collection.

Coroner's inquest in Carter death

A coroner's inquest will be conducted to determine the cause of death of J. R. Carter, 47, of Bartlett, who died Monday in Elk Grove Village.

Elk Grove Village firemen found Carter sitting on the ground in front of 560 Lively Blvd. at 1:30 p.m. Carter complained of heat exhaustion and pains from breathing diesel fumes.

According to the fire department, Carter at first refused to be taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center. He later agreed to go to the hospital. Firemen were summoned by Carter's son.

At 4:40 p.m., the hospital notified the department that Carter had died from unknown causes.

Gift develops into a perfect picture

by JERRY THOMAS

When 10-year-old Kathy Habisohn saw the photograph she had just printed in school, she knew it was the perfect 16th wedding anniversary present for her mom and dad.

Now, school kids have been making gifts for their parents since way back; but, Kathy's gift is a little different.

It's a picture of her mother and father, taken on their wedding day.

Kathy is a Hoffman Estates summer school student in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 studying photography.

"I found an old negative at home and decided to see if I could make a print of it like our teacher showed us," said Kathy. "I did it, too."

"It was so beautiful; it was a picture of my mother standing in a garden next to daddy. She was wearing a long white wedding dress and veil," said the junior photographer.

JOHN SARRIMA, Kathy's teacher, said his students, a mix of fifth through eighth graders, have shown creativity in selecting models for their photography. But Kathy's print is probably the most unusual one that came out of this dark-room, he said.

Sarrima's 48 students at Helen Keller Junior High School learned to master the camera, develop and print their own film. The district also had a photography course of Addams Junior High School. It is taught by Bruno Kozimor.

Mike McGovern, a Schaumburg High School senior, acts as a teacher's aide at Keller. He said students giggle a lot but are so interested in photography they made it fun for him to work through summer vacation.

This is the first time photography has been offered in Dist. 54 to elementary students. The processes Sarrima uses for developing and printing do not require elaborate facilities or equipment.

The students learn to master a simple camera, take their own shots and develop and print them.

"But it's not always easy," said Mary Phelan. The freckled youngster confided "I'm doing rotten, I can't get my film loaded onto the reel to develop it."

KEN CRAFTON, said he has been having fun. "I didn't think I would when mom suggested I go to summer school; now I'm glad I went," he said.

Kelly Karn thinks photography is the "funniest class" she ever attended. "Where else do you get to do your homework in the dark and have fun splashing around in pans of water?" she said.

Sherry Oquist said photography is fun, "but, it made me an outcast in the neighborhood. All my friends run when I come around because I keep asking them to pose for me."

"Except my sister. I took a picture of her and the teacher liked it and put it on the bulletin board. So now I guess she's a famous model," said Sherry. "Yecht!"

Demo organization will meet tonight

Schaumburg Township Regular Democratic Organization will meet tonight at 9 o'clock at Ground Round Restaurant, Roselle and Higgins roads.

Sheldon "Bud" Galanter, Democratic dinner dance ad program chairman, has urged party members to attend.

The organization is finalizing plans for the annual dinner dance Nov. 2 at Lancer Restaurant, Algonquin and Meacham roads, Schaumburg.

For information contact Galanter at 885-3847.

Three illegal aliens arrested

Three illegal aliens were stopped by Elk Grove Village police early this week and turned over to the Immigration department.

Lilorio DeAvila, 34, Antonio Bautista, 32, and Jose Guerrero, 29, all of Chicago, were stopped Monday morning when a patrolman noticed the car they were riding in still had studded snow tires, which are illegal to use during the summer. Police then discovered the men were illegal aliens.

This Rose a thorn in criminal's side

Elk Grove Village Patrolman Raymond Rose has received more letters of recognition from the police department patrol unit than any other officer since the program was started in January.

Lt. Fred Engelbrecht, patrol unit commander, said the letters are used to honor an officer whose actions in a given incident went beyond the normal duty requirements.

Rose was honored for making a traffic stop that resulted in an arrest of a suspect in several armed robberies; apprehending two burglars, and recovering a stolen bicycle before the owner knew the bike was taken.

Patrolmen who have received two letters of recognition are John Bantner, Robert Canary, Kenneth Deters, Steve Ingebrigtsen, Michael Severns and Gerald Walsh.

'A' average at MSU

Robert Schwartz, 506 Brynhaven Court, Elk Grove Village, received a straight "A" average for his last term's work at Michigan State University. He is a junior at the university.

School names can be difficult

moral philosophy, he became president of Williams College in 1836 and held that office until 1872. He was regarded as one of the greatest American educators of his time.

Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights was named after the founder of the Girl Scouts in America. She died in 1927 at the age of 67.

John Jay School in Mount Prospect was named after the famous American statesman who was a member of the first Continental Congress in 1774. Jay also served in Congress, as chief justice of New York state and as minister to Spain.

A famous American explorer, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, was chosen as the name for an Elk Grove Village school in 1967. Byrd, who discovered the South Pole and was the first man to fly over the North Pole in 1926, died in 1957.

Holmes Junior High in Mount Prospect seems to have the most mystery about its name. The correct name of the school is Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. Junior High. Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. was the famous Supreme Court Justice who served from 1902 to 1932.

Many people however, including the school's principal, Richard Jenness, thought the school was named after the famous jurist's son.

According to reference works, though, Holmes had no male children.

Jenness said some students attempted to learn about the school's namesake by going back over minutes of school board meetings and contacting people who were board members when the school was named in 1967. Their efforts, he said, were unsuccessful.

ONE THING is certain. If the school ever wants to change its name, there's no shortage of ideas. On file in the Dist. 59 Administrative Center is a list of persons whose achievements warrant schools being named after them. Included in the names are educators, manufacturers, journalists, doctors, statesmen and scholars. Included are two Elk Grove pioneers, Aaron Miner and Eli Skinner, who settled near Algonquin Road and Arlington Heights Road in the early 1800s.

The last school to be named in the district broke the string of famous names for schools. The school board, unable to agree on a name (some suggested Richard M. Nixon), called it Friendship.

The Des Plaines school is located near Friendship Park, which was named by a young girl in a contest to name the park.

Whatever the name, most will simply be called "school" by children in just a few weeks as classes begin for another year.

photography course for fifth through eighth graders, teaches the basics of taking pictures, developing and printing.

No use crying over spilled—or higher priced—milk

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Liere, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Liere predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Liere attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Liere put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

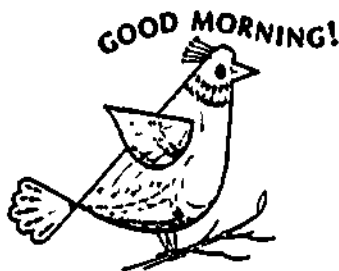

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Liere said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

Two cents per $100 valuation cut

Property tax rate decrease to reduce bills slightly

Palatine property owners will save a couple of bucks when next year's tax bill arrives.

Village trustees this week informally settled on a property tax rate which is about 2 cents per $100 assessed valuation lower than the present rate. The new rate, 63.8 cents, is expected to be formally adopted next week.

What the reduction means to the homeowner is this: A village tax bill this year of $63.80 on a house assessed at $10,000 would be $62.80 next year, a savings of $1.

The figure is an estimation, based on the projected assessed valuation of the village. Former Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun, is devising the tax schedule, estimated a $130 million assessed valuation next year, but he generally figures conservatively.

Last year, he projected an assessed valuation of $114 million for 1973, and the actual valuation was $119 million.

If next year's assessed valuation is higher than $130 million, the tax rate would drop slightly, bringing a greater savings to taxpayers. If the valuation is lower than estimated, the projected 2-cent drop in the tax rate would be reduced and possibly wiped out.

THE LOCAL TAX rate endorsed by the trustees Monday night is similar to figures compiled by Braun, with one change: The trustees restored to the calculations of half-cent per $100 assessed valuation charge for the civil defense fund.

In eliminating the Civil Defense charge, Braun said it was no longer needed because the Civil Defense sirens are now paid for. The trustees thought the fund should remain operative, however, to obtain money for emergency flood relief teams.

Restoring the CD levy cut the overall projected savings to taxpayers from 2.6 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 2 cents.

Village trustees had instructed Braun to reduce the corporate tax levy by 6 cents, in keeping with a campaign promise.

Braun reduced the corporate levy, but increases in other funds which go into the overall village tax levy reduced the decrease to 2.6 cents.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones had stated last week that he would like to reduce the rate even further, but he concurred with other trustees this week in deciding to stick with the 6-cent corporate fund reduction to see what effect it would have on village revenues.

For each penny the corporate levy is reduced, the village loses $13,000 in taxes.

Jones said yesterday his goal is still to move on other sources of revenue, eliminate the corporate levy, and rely FIGURES COMPILED by Finance Director William Hibner indicate the village can expect $10,000 more in revenues next year than this year.

Hibner envisions a $50,000 increase in sales tax; $20,000 in state income tax; $10,000 in liquor licenses; and $5,000 in parking violations.

He anticipates a $5,000 drop in business licenses and $70,000 in real estate taxes.

Little City captures $55,000 from golf

Contributions totaling $55,000 came to the Little City foundation in Palatine for mentally retarded children recently.

The Little City Pro-Am Invitational Golf Tournament at the Hillcrest Country Club in Long Grove brought in $45,000 for the foundation. In the past nine years, the annual golf tournament has raised more than $215,000 for Little City.

Proceeds from a recent Celebrity Ball by the Variety Club of America totaled $10,000 for the Palatine facility. Judge Joseph A. Power, president of Little City, accepted the contribution from Variety Club officials Bene Stein and Arthur Schoenstadt.

Policemen ride parks' motorcycles

Cycle patrol cuts park vandalism

A new motorcycle patrol of Palatine parks begun last week is curtailing the rising vandalism problem experienced in several parks this summer, according to park director Fred Hall.

Hall and park board officials met with village board members Monday evening, and the central topic of their discussion was vandalism, a problem that has hit the district harder this year than last.

The damage is coming in a continuing string of relatively minor incidents — windows broken, picnic tables broken, a corner of the uncompleted maintenance garage knocked over. When added up, those incidents will cost the district more than $1,000.

Parks hardest hit include Community, Maple, Oakwood, Cedar, and Willow parks. But the mischief has started to ebb.

IN THE PAST week, no vandals have hit the parks. One reason may be the first Palatine police patrols on motorcycles. The program will reach its full force next week, when three patrolmen will rotate on two shifts each day, from 9 a.m. to 1 a.m.

The motorcycle patrol is a cooperative program between the park district and the village to provide adequate surveillance of the Palatine bike trail, currently under construction.

Park officials appropriated the funds for purchasing the motorcycle for the police department. Bicyclists and hikers are already using a 2.2-mile portion of the trail along the Commonwealth Edison Company right of way in the village.

HALL SAID YESTERDAY that a possible cause of the increased misbehavior and vandalism in the parks is the recent changeover of police personnel. In June, long-time police chief Robert R. Centner resigned under pressure from village trustees and interim chief Lt. Frank Ortiz was appointed.

Ortiz "has had to try to learn in detail what the problems in the parks are in a very short time," Hall said.

Police who patrol the parks may not always realize they can enforce park district ordinances that are being violated, said park board member Paul Jensen.

The village board intends to evaluate the police surveillance program later this year to determine potential problems in the system by next spring, according to Village Pres. Wendell Jones.

Policemen to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhinelander, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg

Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond. Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

Study of combined sewers, flooding near completion

Work is nearing completion on a preliminary study of flooding in Palatine caused by overloading of combined sanitary and storm sewers, an engineer working on the study said yesterday.

Paul Mewes of DeLeuw, Cather and Co. said the preliminary draft of the study would be submitted soon to Ray Leland, supervising engineer for the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

The MSD is financing the study to decide what to do with combined sewer flows from Palatine during peak storm periods.

Originally, the sanitary district had planned to build a reservoir in Palatine to hold the combined sewage during storms and to rain the reservoir into the system of deep tunnels running southeast which will connect to the proposed O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant in Des Plaines.

That proposal is one of the five possible alternatives analyzed in the study.

A CONSULTING engineer told the Palatine Village Board recently that among the other alternatives are:

- Building a local retention reservoir and draining it through a force main to the Salt Creek Water Reclamation Plant under construction in Schaumburg Township.
- Using a gravel pit at the Salt Creek plant site as a reservoir to hold the combined sewage overflows and then treating the overflows at the Salt Creek Plant.
- Building a local retention reservoir and draining it to the Salt Creek Plant through existing interceptor sewers or
- Eliminating all combined sewers in Palatine by building a separate sewer system. Sewers exist only in the older parts of town.

The consulting village engineer, Walter Hodel, told Palatine officials the separate sewer system alternative would require building one new sewer in virtually every street within the area of the village served by combined sewers.

The study will contain schematic layouts for all five alternative solutions and comparison costs, Hodel said.

The results of the study will be used by the MSD in deciding whether the O'Hare tunnel and reservoir plan for solving combined sewage flooding in Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Des Plaines will also be extended to connect to Palatine.

Buehler swim director sets AAU record

Bobbi Turcotte, program director of the Buehler YMCA, set a swimming record in the 100-meter backstroke at the National AAU Masters Long Course Swimming Championship in Chicago recently.

Mrs. Turcotte beat the former record by nearly 35 seconds, with a time of 1 minute, 32.8 seconds. The previous record was set earlier this year by an Indiana woman.

In other events, Mrs. Turcotte placed second in the 200-meter backstroke, third in both the 100-meter freestyle and 50-meter butterfly, and fourth in the 50-meter freestyle and 50-meter butterfly, and fourth in the 50-meter freestyle.

Mrs. Turcotte headed the organization of the local swim program with the Buehler YMCA.

Luxury condos planned near Plum Grove School

Rolling Meadows officials have been shown plans for an exclusive condominium apartment project near Plum Grove School.

Officials of Teutsch Associates Inc., Rosemont, want to build 21 units on three acres located west of Meacham Road and south of the school. The land is in unincorporated Cook County but the firm is asking annexation to Rolling Meadows. The homes would sell for from $70,000 to $80,000 each.

The land is next to Plum Grove Woodlands area where homes are valued at $100,000. Several residents appeared before city officials Monday to protest the project.

Jack Davis, 1862 S. Brockway, said the project would detract from "the unique, rural single-family area." Another resident said he feared flooding problems, if the two-story condominium apartments are built.

A SPOKESMAN for Teutsch, however, said it is unrealistic to believe the land would be developed as single-family homes and said the condominiums represent the best possible use of the property. He said many residents of Inverness already have expressed desire to sell their homes and move into the $1½-million project.

The three-acre site will have to be rezoned either by the county or the city before the project can be built and a public hearing will be held next month regarding the zoning and annexation to Rolling Meadows. Teutsch officials said they prefer being a part of Rolling Meadows.

Did they deserve a break that day?

Two youths were arrested Monday night after a melee in a Golf Road parking lot, which involved some 50 teenagers and several Des Plaines police officers, according to reports.

Only minor injuries were reported in the brief scuffle but police said the two arrested youths had to be forcibly subdued after one had allegedly struck Des Plaines Patrolman Wendall Whitted.

Charged with public intoxication and battery was Michael Vivado, 17, of 2418 Cedar Ln., Des Plaines. He was being held on $1,000 bond yesterday by police. The other youth, George Bayer, 19, 1229 Belmont, Arlington Heights, was charged with disorderly conduct. Bayer was later released on $25 bond.

The fracas began about 10:45 p.m. when Whitted and patrolman Jack Muhs tried to disperse a large group of youths who had congregated in a parking lot near the McDonald's Restaurant, 725 Golf Rd., according to Des Plaines police.

MUHS TOLD THE Herald yesterday the youths got into their cars and left but returned to the lot about 30 seconds later with an even larger group and began yelling obscenities at them.

The two officers radioed for help and according to reports, Vivado struck Whitted during a confrontation with the youths.

Police said no one involved in the incident required hospital treatment.

Vivado and Bayer will appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept. 27.

Sgt. Robert Ornberg said yesterday police patrols in the area will probably be increased.

Area youth medalist in Special Olympics

Robert Eddis of Palatine recently won a bronze medal in the broad jump at the Special Summer Olympics for handicapped children sponsored by the Chicago Park district.

Robert, 9, lives in unincorporated Palatine Township. He represented Lincoln State School in two events at the Olympics, placing fourth in the 50-yard dash. His bronze medal for the broad jump qualifies him for the national competition in New York.

What's best for 'whose' children?

Maryville site under parents' attack

by MARY BOULIHAN
A News Analysis

"What's best for the children?" All at River Trails Dist. 16 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has been enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart," the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocesan property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 26 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth.

The ice cream is being donated by an Elk Grove Village firm and will be made in the school's old-fashioned ice cream maker. Fruit pies and brownies are being donated by mothers of children attending Immanuel. Proceeds will be used to purchase new band music and equipment.

No use crying over spilled—or higher priced—milk

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Liere, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Liere predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Liere attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Liere put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Liere said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

Replacement plan will take five years

'Woodsman spare that tree' won't protect 1,000 here

Rolling Meadows is undertaking an extensive forestry program aimed at rolling out at least 1,000 trees in the city's parkways termed "undesirable."

The major portion of the program will be done over a five-year period and scattered throughout the city so as not to leave gaping, shadeless holes along any street, said John Hennessy, superintendent of public works yesterday.

Current plans call for the replacement of 200 "undesirable" trees with 200 "desirable" trees each year. Four varieties of trees are presently deemed "desirable" by the city. They are the honey locust, ash white, pin oak and sugar maple.

The tree planting is scheduled to start this fall. The city council is now taking bids on 50 of each of the four "desirable" varieties of trees. The bidding specifications call for each tree to be two and a half inches in diameter and carry a one-year guarantee. Hennessy estimated each tree would cost the city $75.

Residents adjacent to parkways where "undesirable" trees are slated for replacement will be consulted as to which of the four varieties of "desirable" trees they would like to see planted, said Hennessy.

THE TREES THE city plans to phase out include: Chinese, Siberian and American elms, poplars, soft maples, boxelders and low growing fruit and berry producing trees like the mulberry and crabapple trees.

These trees were listed as "undesirable" for a number of reasons, said Hennessy. First, most of the trees have a weak growing characteristic and pose a potential hazard to public safety because they could be damaged by heavy winds, ice storms or some other physical force.

Most of the "undesirable" trees are also fast-growing causing maintenance problems. The forestry department maintains more than 4,500 trees in the city. The fast-growing trees are difficult to keep trimmed because of time factors.

Also most of the "undesirable" trees are short-lived and highly susceptible to a variety of diseases.

The berry and fruit producing trees are included with the "undesirable" trees because they leave a mess in the parkway and their low growing form is a hazard to drivers and pedestrians.

None of those problems are present with the four varieties of trees the city has selected, said Hennessy.

THE NUMBER of undesirable trees in Rolling Meadows is estimated at more than 3,000. The figure includes 1,157 soft maples, 512 Chinese and Siberian Elms, 543 American Elms and varieties and undetermined amounts of poplars and berry trees and fruit trees.

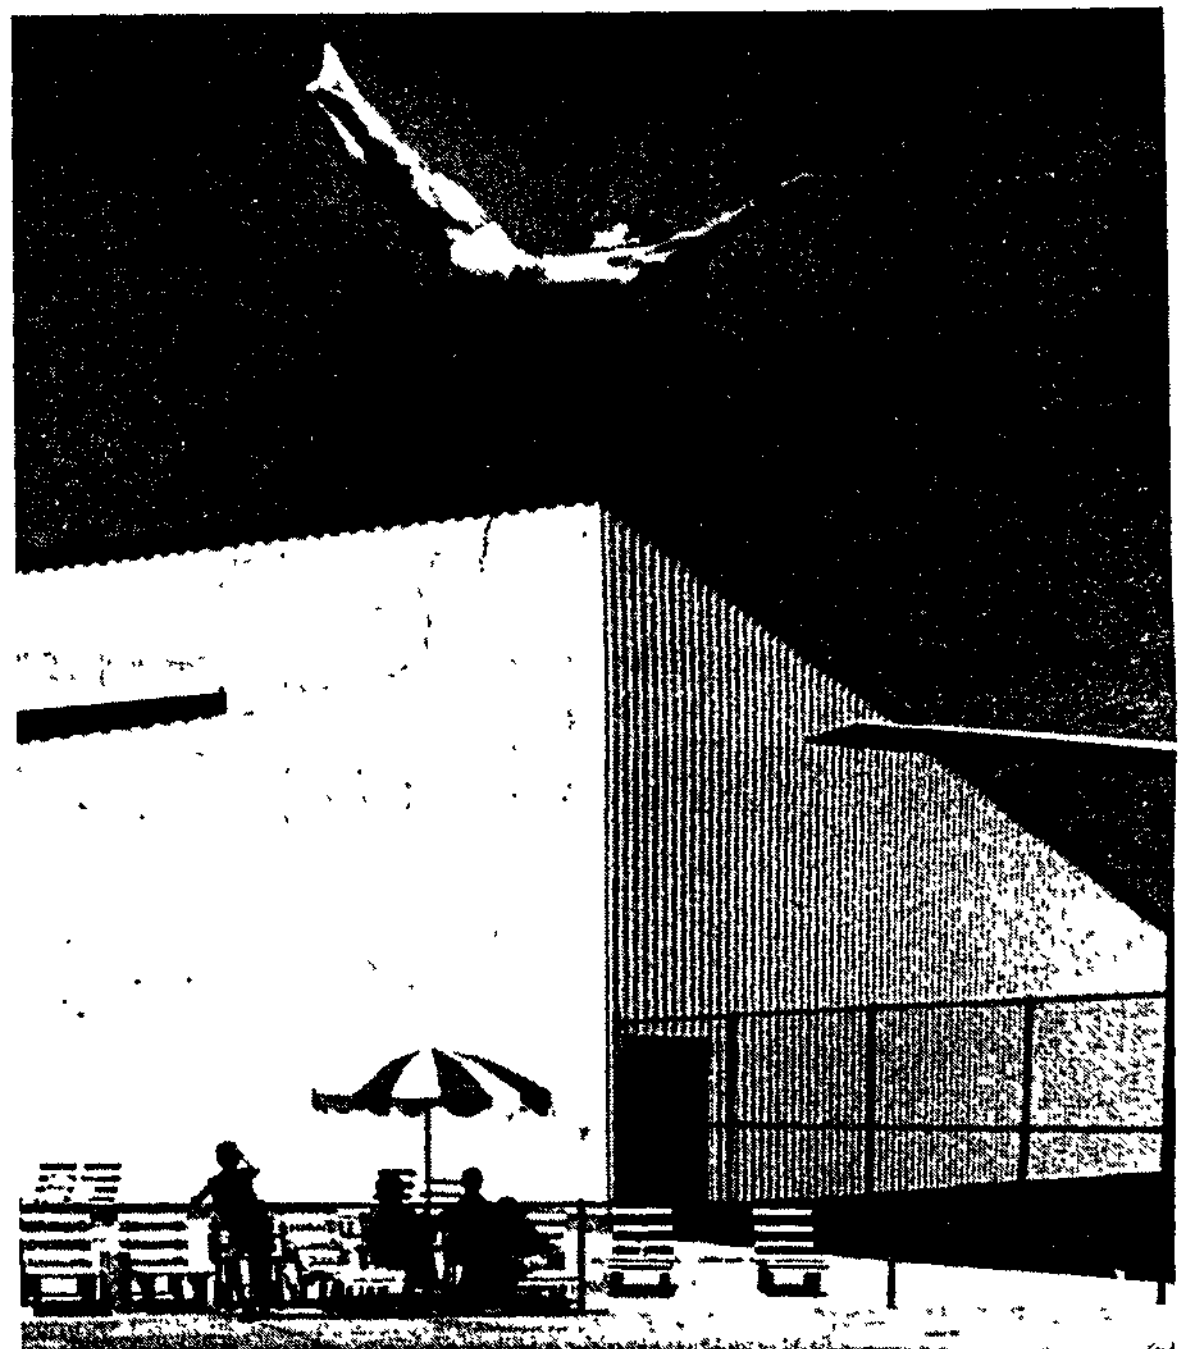

The hiring of a city tree warden is being proposed to enforce the reforestation program, said Hennessy. He said the position of tree warden would be included in a tree ordinance currently being written.

Judges for the contest were: Mayor Roland Meyer; Elizabeth Houldsworth, deputy city clerk; Robert Andrews, a disc jockey for WYEN; Robert Strawn, Paddock Publications photographer; and Rahn, 15, of 2403 Sigwalt; Karen Barnett, 15, of 3709 Bluebird; Karen Peszek, 13, of 2207 Birch; Dorine Horvath, 14, of 4209 Linden; and Jenny Jimenez, 13, of 2611 Park.

The contest, which was held in the theater of Rolling Meadows High School, was emceed by Cindy Thybony, teen government mayor, and Joan Lucas, teen government police chief.

Judges for the contest were: Mayor Roland Meyer; Elizabeth Houldsworth, deputy city clerk; Robert Andrews, a disc jockey for WYEN; Robert Strawn, Paddock Publications photographer; and

21 luxury condos planned

Rolling Meadows officials have been shown plans for an exclusive condominium apartment project near Plum Grove School.

Officials of Teutsch Associates Inc., Rosemont, want to build 21 units on three acres located west of Meacham Road and south of the school. The land is in unincorporated Cook County but the firm is asking annexation to Rolling Meadows.

The homes would sell for from $70,000 to $80,000 each.

The land is next to Plum Grove Woodlands area where homes are valued at $100,000. Several residents appeared before city officials Monday to protest the project.

Jack Davis, 1862 S. Brockway, said the project would detract from "the unique, rural single-family area." Another resident said he feared flooding problems, if the two-story condominium apartments are built.

A SPOKESMAN for Teutsch, however, said it is unrealistic to believe the land would be developed as single-family homes and said the condominiums represent the best possible use of the property. He said many residents of Inverness already have expressed desire to sell their homes and move into the $1½-million project.

The three-acre site will have to be rezoned either by the county or the city before the project can be built and a public hearing will be held next month regarding the zoning and annexation to Rolling Meadows. Teutsch officials said they prefer being a part of Rolling Meadows.

Annual Youth Week parade set tonight

The wildly decorated cars of teen government candidates will wind through the streets of Rolling Meadows tonight during the annual Youth Week campaign parade.

The candidates cars, marching units and entries from other youth and civic organizations will assemble at 6:15 at Jonas Salk School, 3705 Pheasant Dr. The parade is scheduled for 6:50.

Cheryl Koepple captures 'Miss Rolling Meadows' title

Cheryl Koepple, 15, of 3602 N. Falcon Ct., was crowned Miss Rolling Meadows last night at a bonfire sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Teen Government.

Cheryl succeeds Rhonda Green of 3608 Wren Ln. as Miss Rolling Meadows. Cheryl will reign over Youth Week activities, which started Monday with the beauty pageant, and participate in other city activities during the year.

A junior at Rolling Meadows High School, Cheryl was selected from a field of 11 contestants. She sang "First Time Ever." She was also judged on appearance, poise and answers to questions from the judges.

Runners-up in the contest were Christine Sadler, 16, of 3700 Meadow and Sharon Duffy, 15, of 4501 Peacock. Christine, who is also a junior at Rolling Meadows High School, modeled and displayed clothes she has sewn for her talent. Sharon, a sophomore at Rolling Meadows High School, did a toe dance to "Swan Lake."

THE OTHER contestants in the contest were: Carol Shearer, 14, of 3802 Bluebird; Kathy Little, 13, of 2100 Quail; Chris Hansen, 13, of 2117 Quail; Tony

Policemen to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhinelander, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Buehler Y plans Austrian ski trip

A one-week ski excursion next winter to the Austrian Alps is being offered by the Buehler YMCA.

The trip to Kitzbuhel, in the Tyrolean Alps of Austria, will be Jan. 25 through Feb. 2. Fares are $389 for first class and $329 for the budget plan. More details of the trip are available from the Y by calling 359-2400. Reservations, including a $50 deposit, are being taken now by the Y.

Board meets Monday

The Salt Creek Rural Park District board will hold a special meeting on Monday at 8 p.m. at the Rose Field House in Palatine.

are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6893 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

What's best for 'whose' children?

Maryville site under parents' attack

by MARY HOULIHAN
A News Analyst

"What's best for the children?" All at River Trails Dist. 16 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label." The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart," the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocesan property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 26 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth.

That's our whole philosophy, to get Maryville involved in the community. I think it's much healthier for the children and for the community."

AS FOR PARENTS' worries that students from the special education facility will have problems in being on the same campus with students from the junior high school, Father Smyth forces no great difficulties. They're mixing now (in the regular district schools)," he said, so they're really worrying about nothing. I personally can't see any real problems outside of the two I would mention of transportation and communication — that is, that Maryville would be physically closer."

Retzlaff agrees with Smyth in his assessment of potential problems at the junior high school site. I feel up until recently, there's been a very healthy, positive acceptance of our educating the Maryville students in the district," Retzlaff said.

When the Maryville children were first integrated into the schools in the district outside River Road five years ago, it was more of a novelty," Retzlaff explained. "They said to their friends, 'here, my kid has a black kid in his room.' It wasn't as if they were living next door."

"I feel there is throughout the public now a sort of fear of the unknown," Retzlaff said. "I do not feel as if most of the public has had that much contact with the students from Maryville. But I feel obliged to say these youngsters are human beings with some basic human needs that need to be satisfied in all youngsters."

Village manager will appoint next fire chief

Appointment of the next fire chief in Palatine will be up to the village manager.

Village trustees this week adopted an ordinance giving the manager authority to hire and fire the fire chief, with the advice and consent of the village board.

Previously, the authority was vested solely in the trustees.

The new ordinance is similar to an ordinance regulating the hiring and firing of the police chief. That ordinance was approved by the trustees a few weeks ago.

The present fire chief, Orville Holms, took over the fire department in 1960. He is 60 years old.

Park district 'Y' sponsor ice skating

Ice skating classes at the Arlington Ice Spectrum in Palatine are being sponsored through both the Buehler YMCA and the Palatine Park District this winter.

The 10-week sessions begin Sept. 10. Details of class times and fees are available at the Y, 115 W. Johnson St., through Friday, then at the new building at Northwest Highway and Baldwin Road after Aug. 27. Registrations are being taken now.

The park district ice skating class schedule is available at the park administration building, 262 E. Palatine Rd. Registration starts next week.

Class offerings include lessons for preschoolers and their mothers, women, youngsters age first grade and older, and special sessions in power skating and hockey.

Village takeover of fire district looks 'favorable'

Reaction generally appears favorable to plans to implement village assumption of the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District.

Members of a joint village-fire district committee studying recommendations for a municipal fire department agreed last night to meet at 8 p.m. Aug. 29 in the municipal building. Representatives of each of the two governmental units will meet separately to prepare their own conclusions on the final report prepared for the village by National Loss Control Service Corp. of Long Grove.

Fire district and village representatives had few questions on the report and all seemed to agree with the comment by Mark Dick, of the fire district board, "My personal opinion was the report was very good," Dick said.

At the Aug. 29 meeting, the two units will present written reports to each other and develop a joint statement of conclusions and recommendations. The two groups of representatives will then return to their full boards to seek endorsement of the joint statement.

THE REPORT sets two steps for completely eliminating fire protection districts within village limits in establishing a municipal fire department. The first is assumption of all assets, liabilities and responsibilities of the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District for all persons the district presently serves, including those living outside village limits. This should be completed "at least by the beginning of 1975," the report recommends.

The second step would be to disannex all portions of the village now in three other fire protection districts and serve them with the village department. Currently, parts of the village are served by Palatine Rural Fire Protection District, Bartlett-Countryside Fire Protection District and East Dundee Fire Protection District. Only the Palatine Rural section now includes significant population. It covers the Winston Knolls subdivision.

The second step is to be completed as early in 1975 as possible. The report notes it will probably be necessary to build a third fire station in the Palatine Rural area. With anticipated population growth, that should not be delayed, the report says.

The report strongly emphasizes the value of volunteer firemen as a supplement to paid firefighters, and encourages increased use of the volunteers. This would improve volunteer morale and insure continued volunteer manpower, at least for a time. It also would save salaries for as many as ten paid firemen.

NATIONAL LOSS complimented the fire protection district on a stepped-up training program initiated since April in which full-paid men now receive at least 2½ hours daily training. It recommends village construction of improved training facilities for practical work. The district now has only a classroom available.

The report also compliments the fire district on recently starting a mutual response procedure for specialized construction areas with the Schaumburg village fire department. The program shows "a good deal of foresight" by fire district officials, National Loss said.

After the village assumes the district, it should not be necessary to purchase any equipment for ten years, with the possible exception of one ambulance, according to the report.

By the end of 1975, the manpower may have to be increased from six to ten paid men, depending on the type of scheduling employed. This also will depend on whether a new station is constructed in the area north of the toll road, which now includes Winston Knolls and the soon-to-be developed Howie-In-the-Hills area.

Residents protest park plans

A group of residents living near Highpoint Park presented the Hoffman Estates Park Board of Commissioners Tuesday night with an alternative placement of park facilities to insure their "privacy."

Bob Kosrow, 503 Glen Lake Road, at the south edge of the park, said, "This is no longer for a park for the community. It's a sports complex."

Kosrow, who said he was representing 250 area residents, presented the board with plans to move a parking lot closer to recreation fields and eliminate one baseball diamond. This would create a buffer zone between the homes and the organized athletic activities.

A 40-car parking lot has been tentatively located at Hermitage Lane, 10 feet behind houses along Glen Lake Road. Four baseball diamonds also have been set for the park. The improvements were part of a $675,000 referendum approved by Hoffman Estates residents.

TOM BARBER, park commissioner, told Kosrow he was not against any changes at the park and that the plans would be placed on the agenda for the Sept. 4 park board meeting.

Kosrow said the parking lot had to be moved closer to athletic fields to prevent people from parking on nearby streets. He added that people also would walk across yards to get to the fields and not use the parking lot as tentatively located. "People won't park in that lot," Kosrow said. "They park in what spot is most convenient for them. If I knew this would happen before I moved in I wouldn't have moved there," Kosrow added.

Commissioner George Seaver compared the residents' position to other citizen-based complaints saying, "Everyone wants street lights but don't want ones put on their corner."

Milk price hike could hit 20 cents a gallon

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Liere, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Liere predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Liere attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Liere put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Liere said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

POLICE REMOVE victim from auto after a two car accident last night at 9:22 p.m. at the intersection of Higgins and Meacham Roads in Schaumburg. Three persons were taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village; Elizabeth Wittek and Mildred Wittek and Daniel Thompson, 18, all of Hanover Park. Two other persons in the car in which Thompson was riding were not hurt.

Gift develops into a perfect picture

by JERRY THOMAS

When 10-year-old Kathy Habisohn saw the photograph she had just printed in school, she knew it was the perfect 16th wedding anniversary present for her mom and dad.

Now, school kids have been making gifts for their parents since way back; but, Kathy's gift is a little different.

It's a picture of her mother and father, taken on their wedding day.

Kathy is a Hoffman Estates summer school student in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 studying photography.

"I found an old negative at home and decided to see if I could make a print of it like our teacher showed us," said Kathy. "I did it, too."

"It was so beautiful; it was a picture of my mother standing in a garden next to daddy. She was wearing a long white wedding dress and veil," said the junior photographer.

JOHN SARRIMA, Kathy's teacher, said his students, a mix of fifth through eighth graders, have shown creativity in selecting models for their photography." But Kathy's print is probably the most unusual one that came out of this darkroom, he said.

Sarrima's 46 students at Helen Keller Junior High School learned to master the camera, develop and print their own film. The district also had a photography course of Addams Junior High School. It is taught by Bruno Kozimor.

Mike McGovern, a Schaumburg High School senior, acts as a teacher's aide at Keller. He said students giggle a lot but are so interested in photography they made it fun for him to work through summer vacation.

This is the first time photography has been offered in Dist. 54 to elementary students. The processes Sarrima uses for developing and printing do not require elaborate facilities or equipment.

The students learn to master a simple camera, take their own shots and develop and print them.

"But it's not always easy," said Mary Phelan. The freckled youngster confided "I'm doing rotten, I can't get my film loaded onto the reel to develop it."

KEN CRAFTON, said he has been having fun. "I didn't think I would when mom suggested I go to summer school; now I'm glad I went," he said.

Kelly Karn thinks photography is the "funniest class" she ever attended. "Where else do you get to do your homework in the dark and have fun splashing around in pans of water?" she said.

Sherry Oquist said photography is fun, "but, it made me an outcast in the neighborhood. All my friends run when I come around because I keep asking them to pose for me."

"Except my sister. I took a picture of her and the teacher liked it and put it on the bulletin board. So now I guess she's a famous model," said Sherry. "Yeehi!"

Men's touch football signup

The Schaumburg Park District will accept team registrations for the men's touch football league until Sept. 1.

Six teams have already registered, and there is room for four more. Any group of men may sign up. Maximum roster for a team is 16 men.

Registration fees will depend upon the number of teams that sign up. Team play will start Sept. 8. All games will be played at Meineke Park on Saturday afternoons.

For further information call the park district office at 894-4660.

Police from 'all over' to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhineland, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID it was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hurst Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

Japanese visitors

Two 16-year-old Japanese students were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Al Reznik recently in their Hoffman Estates home.

The students, Shogo Iwashita and Toshihisa Tamaru, are on a cross country tour that will take them from New York City to San Francisco, said Mrs. Reznik.

In Hoffman Estates they toured the new Hoffman Estates High School and were led by Tom Hillesheim, the school's principal.

They also visited Woodfield with the Rezniks and had ice cream at Farrells, climaxing a weekend of activity that included an old fashioned bar-b-que at the Reznik home and attendance at the Cubs-Houston game. They also had dinner at Don Roths Restaurant in Chicago where they ordered from a menu printed in Japanese and later visited the 94th floor observation deck at the John Hancock Building.

Tennis lessons signup

The Hoffman Estates Park District is conducting registration for tennis lessons to be held in October at the Woodfield Racquet Club, Schaumburg.

Registrations will be accepted at the Vogel Administration Building, 650 W. Higgins Rd., until Oct. 1 or when a class is filled. There will be 10 lessons.

Classes for beginning juniors, 8- to 18-year-olds, and for advanced beginners, also 8- to 18-year-olds, will be held Mondays from 4 to 5 p.m. starting Oct. 1.

Lessons for beginning and advanced beginning adults will be conducted on Tuesdays from 2 to 3 p.m. starting Oct. 2. Beginning and advanced beginning couples will take lessons on Saturdays from 3 to 4 p.m. and 4 to 5 p.m., respectively, starting Oct. 6.

The fee per one tennis student is $20 and per couple, $32.

Athletic bottle drive

A bottle drive to benefit the Hoffman Estates Athletic Association will be held Saturday between 1 and 3 p.m.

Collecting only returnable bottles will be boys on association football teams, their cheerleaders and coaches. They plan to cover the entire residential area of Hoffman Estates, including apartment complexes.

Persons wishing to donate, but not planning to be home during the drive, can arrange for collection by calling Diane Sykust, 885-1115. In those cases, the bottles could be left outside the home, or an appointment would be arranged, said Mrs. Sykust.

The proceeds will be spent for equipment and supplies for the athletic teams. The association also points out the ecological advantages of returning bottles, rather than throwing them away.

Nursery open house

An open house will be held tomorrow for the Schaumburg Nursery School at Bethel Baptist Church, 200 N. Roselle Road, Schaumburg.

Persons interested are invited to attend between 1 and 3 p.m. and between 7:30 and 9 p.m. The school is for 4-year-olds and for children who will be 3 years old by Dec. 1. Opening day is Sept. 4.

Activities are planned to enrich the child's language skills, music appreciation, creative expression and scientific understanding. Morning sessions are 9-11:30 a.m. The afternoon period is 1-3:30 p.m. Transportation is available. For more information call 883-3231 or 883-8878.

Car wash Saturday

A car wash will be held Saturday by Boy Scout Troop 183 of Schaumburg at the Clark Service Station, 1710 W. Wise Rd.

Cost will be $1.50 for the wash. Hours will be 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Proceeds will go to sponsor activities for the new troop, a spokesman said.

Lutheran school to open

St. John Lutheran School will begin its 1973-74 term Aug. 29 with a worship service for students and their parents.

After the service, to begin at 9 a.m., students will register in the gymnasium and will meet with their teachers until 11 a.m.

The school enrolls children between kindergarten and eighth grade. Secular courses are offered along with the standard elementary curriculum taught by certified teachers. A number of extra-curricular activities are also sponsored by the school.

For more information call John Janow, principal at 894-4787 or the school secretary at 529-5328.

Pay raise for firemen

Three Hoffman Estates firemen will receive pay raises of $760 a year each after finishing one year of probationary service to the fire district.

James Clark, James Dugan and David Baird became firemen in July, 1972. All started at a salary of $10,000 a year.

by MARCIA KRAMER

The Palatine Village Band is temporarily on firm financial ground, but if the footing gets slippery, it may become known as the Schaumburg or Arlington Heights Village Band.

Glenn B. Stephenson, treasurer of the 53-member band, said the band has enough funds to see it through the spring. "Then we'll have to take it from there."

He confirmed reports the band has been informally approached by Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher about being sponsored by that village, but said no firm offers have been made.

Band members also have had informal contact with Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows officials about possible funding, but nothing firm has materialized from these discussions either, Stephenson said.

He described the Schaumburg overtures as "sounding us out."

Asked whether the band would consider leaving Palatine for sponsorship in another Northwest suburb, Stephenson replied, "We'll go where we can survive."

"We would certainly like to stay in Palatine if we could," he said. "We'll stay here unless someone comes in with an offer we can't refuse."

The offer, of course, would be in the form of money, which the band needs in order to pay its conductor, purchase and maintain equipment and instruments and obtain sheet music.

Demo organization will meet tonight

Schaumburg Township Regular Democratic Organization will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at Ground Round Restaurant, Roselle and Higgins roads.

Sheldon "Bud" Galanter, Democratic dinner dance ad program chairman, has urged party members to attend.

For information contact Galanter at 883-3847.

THE BAND'S usual budget has been $3,000 annually, "but we can get by on $1,500," Stephenson said. That sum would cover the conductor's fees but instruments would go unserved and music would have to be borrowed from other area bands, mainly from schools.

The band currently has $750, and will receive a $1,000 appropriation from the Palatine Park District, its largest benefactor since the Village of Palatine stopped its annual $2,000 payments two years ago.

Of the $750 on hand, $500 came from the musicians' union residual fund — the first time the village band has tapped that source of revenue. Another $100 was a donation from the Palatine Lions Club.

The band also has requested funds from Palatine Township officials and the Illinois Fine Arts Council.

ANOTHER AVENUE of revenue being discussed among band members is a "band tax" in Palatine, which could be instituted only after a taxpayers referendum.

Some band members have already suggested a slogan — "Two loaves of bread a year would do it" — but Stephenson said the tax is not being seriously considered at this time. It may be proposed if local taxes go down substantially.

The amount of the tax would be minimal — "One dollar a family would be more than enough," Stephenson said.

Band members, about 15 per cent of whom live in Palatine, have some nostalgic feelings about being known as the Palatine Village Band. The present band was formed in 1958, and Palatine had a village band as far back as the 1880s.

However, any move by the band would more likely be influenced by money than nostalgia.

The Palatine Park District has provided funds for several years, and, with one park board member currently in the band and another formerly in the band, that source of money is not likely to dry up.

They deserved a break that day, some got away

Two youths were arrested Monday night after a melee in a Golf Road parking lot, which involved some 50 teenagers and several Des Plaines police officers, according to reports.

Only minor injuries were reported in the brief scuffle but police said the two arrested youths had to be forcibly subdued after one had allegedly struck Des Plaines Patrolman Wendall Whitted.

Charged with public intoxication and battery was Michael Vivado, 17, of 2418 Cedar Ln., Des Plaines. He was being held on $1,000 bond yesterday by police. The other youth, George Bayer, 19, 1229 Belmont, Arlington Heights, was charged with disorderly conduct. Bayer was later released on $25 bond.

The fracas began about 10:45 p.m. when Whitted and patrolman Jack Muhs tried to disperse a large group of youths who had congregated in a parking lot near the McDonald's Restaurant, 725 Golf Rd., according to Des Plaines police.

MUHS TOLD THE Herald yesterday the youths got into their cars and left but returned to the lot about 30 seconds later with an even larger group and began yelling obscenities at them.

The two officers radioed for help and according to reports, Vivado struck Whitted during a confrontation with the youths.

Police said no one involved in the incident required hospital treatment.

Vivado and Bayer will appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept. 27.

Sgt. Robert Ornberg said yesterday police patrols in the area will probably be increased.

Tree recycling facility to be built within year

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

A new tree recycling plant east of Wheeling will be built, "probably within the year," according to Chief Forester Samuel Gabriel of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The Cook County Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners voted Monday to award a contract for the construction of the plant, he said.

Plans for the plant have been under way for several months. However, the forest preserve district had postponed awarding a final contract until it received word on a state bill which might have allowed for open burning of area trees once again.

THE DISTRICT had feared that if open burning of trees were permitted the new plant might be unnecessary. However, last week Gov. Daniel Walker vetoed the bill in question.

The recycling plant is intended as a solution to a long-standing problem with diseased tree disposal in the area.

Before the 1971 ban on open tree burning, many Northwest suburbs, along with private firms, had burned diseased trees at the district site where the plant will be located. Since the ban most trees have been sent to sanitary landfills. However, owners of the landfills are reluctant to accept diseased trees, because of the space they take up.

The new plant should eliminate this problem. Plant equipment will strip of diseased portions of the trees, such as the bark, leaving the rest of the wood usable for commercial purposes. Bark and other non-usable wood will be chipped up.

UNDER THE TERMS of the contract which the board approved, the Rossi Contracting Co. will be licensed to build and operate the recycling plant. The company will assume all plant construction costs, which should be between $125,000 and $185,000, according to James Tyndall, district assistant general superintendent.

Thus the company will own the plant equipment, although the forest preserve will retain ownership of the site.

Prior to the opening of the new plant, the district will put out a letter to all previous users of the burning site, Tyndall said. The letter will detail the plant services and costs for using it, which have not been determined at this time.

"We're hoping that the same people who used the burning site previously will use the new plant," Gabriel said.

Hoffman Estates special census begins Oct. 11

A special census will begin in Hoffman Estates Oct. 11, and continue for two or three weeks.

The village board authorized Clerk Helen Wozniak to initiate the special census early this summer, and the U.S. Census Bureau has just scheduled the dates. Interviews of potential census takers will be conducted Oct. 9, and persons selected will be trained Oct. 10. Census takers are paid 11 cents per recorded name.

The census will indicate population growth since the last head count, conducted two years ago. It will cost the village about $12,000, but is expected to increase village revenues from the state for sales and motor fuel taxes, which are distributed based on population.

The last census indicated about 28,500 persons lived in the village, and it is anticipated the current population is between 31,000 and 32,000. The revenue increase has been estimated at $31,000 to $68,000 per year.

Larwin wants zoning change

Officials of Larwin-Illinois Inc. will present continued testimony Aug. 29, on a proposed 2,500-unit rental and condominium complex when Schaumburg's Zoning Board of Appeals meets.

Larwin representatives were asked last week to prepare detailed site plans indicating exact dimensions of each type of unit planned as well as updated ground coverage figures.

Larwin is asking that the 114-acre site east of Plum Grove Road between Golf and Higgins roads be rezoned from M-1 (manufacturing) to B-2 (business) for special use as a planned unit development. If approved, construction would begin next April, according to Howard Borde, an attorney and vice president of Larwin.

Larwin representatives are scheduled to meet with officials of Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 to discuss a promised five acre school site.

School officials present at this week's hearing indicated need for a larger site to accommodate the 816 students expected to come from the development.

Luxury condos planned near Plum Grove School

Rolling Meadows officials have been shown plans for an exclusive condominium apartment project near Plum Grove School.

Officials of Teutsch Associates Inc., Rosemont, want to build 21 units on three acres located west of Meacham Road and south of the school. The land is in unincorporated Cook County but the firm is asking annexation to Rolling Meadows.

The homes would sell for from $70,000 to $80,000 each.

The land is next to Plum Grove Woodlands area where homes are valued at $100,000. Several residents appeared before city officials Monday to protest the project.

Jack Davis, 1862 S. Brockway, said the project would detract from "the unique, rural single-family area." Another resident said he feared flooding problems, if the two-story condominium apartments are built.

A SPOKESMAN for Teutsch, however, said it is unrealistic to believe the land would be developed as single-family homes and said the condominiums represent the best possible use of the property. He said many residents of Inverness already have expressed desire to sell their homes and move into the $1½-million project.

The three-acre site will have to be rezoned either by the county or the city before the project can be built and a public hearing will be held next month regarding the zoning and annexation to Rolling Meadows. Teutsch officials said they prefer being a part of Rolling Meadows.

No use crying over spilled—or higher priced—milk

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Liere, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Liere predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Liere attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Liere put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Liere said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

River Trails choice hit

Residents protest Maryville site

More than 100 residents of River Trails School Dist. 26 showed up at the district's board of education meeting last night to protest the decision to make the River Trails Junior High School site for the new Maryville Academy.

The school board voted 5-2 Aug. 7 to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same grounds as the junior high.

At that meeting several parents protested the decision saying the public had not been given sufficient information or sufficient time to voice their opinions on the site.

Karen Zuck, representing the committee for the reconsideration of the junior high site, Tuesday presented a list of five questions to the board concerning the site which she said the committee would like answered in writing by Aug. 31.

THE FIVE questions dealt with requests for a copy of the educational specifications for the new school, a building site description of the junior high and a request for a freeze on any work currently in progress on the new school.

Also requested was a statement about where the new school's athletic field would be located and a transcript of all conversations with the Illinois Capitol Development Board, which oversees the construction of all state schools.

In addition the committee asked for answers on questions about the facilities of the new building and about purchase negotiations for a school site.

Also requested was information on who will pay for bus service for the Maryville students, whether the new school will serve all district children and whether the state has mandated that the Maryville site be located at the junior high.

In responding to the committee's request, board member William Haase assured Mrs. Zuck the presentation to be made at the Sept. 4 board meeting "will respond to the requests made."

(The board did not schedule further discussion on the Maryville site until Sept. 4 because two board members will be out of town until then.)

DESPITE THE reassurances, the board did not give any hint of changing its decision on the junior high site. "I'm not sure I read the sense of the board as reconsidering the action," said Haase. "I think we're prepared to offer a more in-depth analysis for the public."

(In fact board president Lloyd Demel has already stated he plans to make his personal file on the Maryville site negotiations available to anyone who would like to look at it at the Sept. 4 meeting.)

Board member Ted Wattenberg echoed Haase's sentiments. "Under the circumstances I think it (the junior high site) is the best decision. I think we needed a professional's advice to show that we have reached a decision on a reasonable basis," Wattenberg added.

Though the committee requested answers by Aug. 31, board member Sylvia Lurie said it would be very difficult to give the committee the answers by then. "We've been having so many other meetings it would be unreasonable (to expect answers by Aug. 31)," Mrs. Lurie said.

Responding to this, Mrs. Zuck said she and the committee would be "very willing to wait until Sept. 2," although they would prefer to see the answers before then.

"I feel I am being fair to them by giving them time," said Mrs. Zuck. "I hope they'll be fair to me by answering the questions."

Village weighs buying Rob Roy for open space

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert said last night the village is considering buying the Rob Roy golf course and preserving it as open space for the community.

Teichert told the village board meeting that an investigation into ways of financing purchase of the 180-acre site already has begun. He estimated the price tag on the property at $10 million. None of the trustees present voiced any objection to the study.

The golf course, north of Euclid Avenue between Wheeling and Wolf roads, is the subject of annexation and rezoning petitions recently filed by Kenroy, Inc., a Skokie development firm that wants to build multi-family housing there.

School taxes should drop despite new programs

by MARY HOULIHAN

The tax rate for residents in Mount Prospect School Dist. 57 is expected to be a bit lower next year even though the district will be adding several new programs to the budget.

The administration has estimated that the rate next year will be about $2.508 per $100 of assessed valuation, compared to $2.52 last year. The reason for the slight decrease, according to finance committee chairman William Holloway, is that the district's bond and interest fund levy has been lowered. "The amount outstanding on the bonds is less," explained Holloway. Several funds were also lowered, he said, because of a slight increase in the district's assessed valuation.

THE 1973-74 budget totals more than $4 million, slightly more than last year's figure.

It's expected that the district will have to issue tax anticipation warrants (TAWs) — in effect, loans on next year's taxes, to pay off a deficit of about $45,000.

Several changes were made in the tentative budget after a public hearing Monday. Most significant was an addition of $150,000 for new educational programs.

One-half this money is to be spent on programs immediately. Included among these is a provision to hire a number of teacher aides in the schools' learning resource centers. According to Supt. Earl Sutter, this program will be instituted to "provide some continuity in the program so that there is someone available to the learning resources teacher everyday."

Also included in the new programs is a provision for an additional instrumental music teacher. Through this appointment, "we hope to bring the beginning band instruction now furnished by the Music Boosters back to being supported by the schools," said Sutter.

ANOTHER NEW PROGRAM being planned for this year is an extended working period for school librarians. "This will provide an opportunity, if needed, to employ the librarian at the end of the school year to do the sorts of things needed to be done to close the library and to get it in shape for the coming year," Sutter said.

CHILDREN AT MARYVILLE Academy find a learning environment, even though they are hampered by poor and outdated school conditions. The children became a concern of River Trails Dist. 26 in 1968 when the academy could no longer provide an education for them. Controversy has clouded the latest efforts to select a site for a new, well-equipped facility to replace the aging and unsafe River Road school.

Maryville site under parents' attack

by MARY HOULIHAN

A News Analysis

"What's best for the children?" All at River Trails Dist. 15 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

Police hunt poodle that bit boy, 7

Mount Prospect Police are searching for a poodle that bit a 7-year-old youth on the finger Monday.

If the dog, described as a small brown poodle wearing a green collar with diamonds, can be found before Aug. 30, Donald Schenk, 1767 Wood Ln., may escape a painful series of anti-rabies shots. Police need to have the dog tested to determine if it is rabid.

Police said they believe the dog is from the Wood Lane neighborhood. He bit Schenk just before 12:30 p.m. Monday in front of 1764 Wood Ln.

Anyone with knowledge of the dog should call the police at 392-6000.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart" the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocesan property would have cost the school district a

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhineland, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Lt. Earl DuBeau of the Hillside Police Department said yesterday he expects more than 100 squad cars to participate in the procession in a display of sympathy. Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totalling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eamon.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

Twenty teachers newly hired in Mount Prospect

Twenty teachers have been hired and assigned to duties in Mount Prospect Dist. 59 schools.

At Lincoln Junior High School, they are: Vincent DiGiannantonio, mathematics, $7,725 per year; James Mattson, mathematics, $7,725; Jan Miraz, language arts, $8,270; John Pedicone, language arts, $7,725; Melanie Phillips, home economics, $7,725; Ellen Gnoyke, mathematics, $7,997; and Susan Preglow, French and social studies, $8,900.

New staff members at Busse School are: Carol Ann Boyle, nurse, $7,725; Christa Dettmer, speech correction, $9,123; Linda Engel, learning disabilities, $7,725; and Fred Smith, intermediate teaching, $7,725.

At Lions Park School, new teachers are: Nancy Casolaro, primary, $8,270; Barbara Parys, primary, $7,725; and Ann Thompson, intermediate, $7,725. One primary teacher, Victoria Freedlund, has been assigned to Fairview School, $7,725.

New teachers at Sunset Park School are: Gerri DelBocelo, primary, $8,500; Mary Ann Yoder, elementary education, $9,250; and Betty Cutler, librarian, $11,810.

Gregory School staff additions include: Lisa Schulman, intermediate, $7,725; and Eileen Topor, intermediate, $9,250.

Variations in salary depend on education and previous teaching experience. Base pay for a new teacher with a bachelor's degree and no experience is $7,723.

Local policeman in NU program

Mount Prospect Police Sgt. Edward Nastek will be attending the nine-month Traffic Police Training Program at Northwestern University's Traffic Institute starting Sept. 13.

Nastek will be the only Mount Prospect policeman among the 103 chosen to study at the institute. Last year, Sgt. Joseph Bopp took the course.

"The invaluable training experience he will gain will be of great benefit to the department and the community," Police Chief Bert Giddens said in a release. Mount Prospect will be receiving financial assistance for Nastek's studies through Illinois' Comprehensive Highway Safety Program.

The institute's program is designed to provide overall management development as well as specialized study areas in administration of training programs, administration of police traffic services and police management.

minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the staff would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 25 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth. That's our whole philosophy, to get Maryville involved in the community. I think it's much healthier for the children and for the community."

AS FOR PARENTS' worries that students from the special education facility will have problems in being on the same campus with students from the junior high school, Father Smyth foresees no great difficulties. They're mixing now (in the regular district schools)," he said, so they're really worrying about nothing. I personally can't see any real problems outside of the two I would mention of transportation and communication — that is, that Maryville would be physically closer."

Retzlaff agrees with Smyth in his assessment of potential problems at the junior high school site. I feel up until recently, there's been a very healthy, positive acceptance of our educating the Maryville students in the district," Retzlaff said.

When the Maryville children were first integrated into the schools in the district outside River Road five years ago, it was more of a novelty," Retzlaff explained. "They said to their friends, 'here, my kid has a black kid in his room.' It wasn't as if they were living next door."

"I feel there is throughout the public now a sort of fear of the unknown," Retzlaff said. "I do not feel as if most of the public has had that much contact with the students from Maryville. But I feel obliged to say these youngsters are human beings with some basic human needs that need to be satisfied in all youngsters."

Children living east of Ill. Rte. 63 and south of Northwest Highway may also ride the bus free if they live 1½ miles from school. Those living more than eight blocks away but less than a mile and a half away must pay to ride the bus.

The school board approved the continuation of the lunch program provided that the district is allowed to set its own standards for cleanliness, the number of attendants and freshness of food.

In other business Monday, the board also approved continuation of the board's present busing program. According to the program, all students living north of Northwest Highway who live 1½ miles from school may ride the bus free. Those living less than a mile and a half away can ride the bus for a fee of $25 a year.

The bonding company for the job's original contractor, reportedly went bankrupt, declined to take over the job. The new contract is for the same amount as the old one, $4,400.

last year was unbreakable, while the acrylic material breaks as easily as glass. According to Danta, some polycarbonate material will continue to be used in limited areas where breakage is high.

In other action, the board accepted a bid for the landscaping of Friendship School in the amount of $24,275. The bid was from Old Mill Flower and Garden Center of Lake Zurich. Work on the landscaping should begin in about a week, according to school officials.

Schools to use breakable materials in new windows

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 School Board, in somewhat of a surprise move at its meeting Monday night, voted to again change materials for window replacement at the district's 22 buildings.

The board voted 5-1 to return to using an acrylic window material that should save the district about $3,000 to $5,000 in window replacement costs during the next year, according to Adolph M. Danta, director of buildings and grounds.

Although the acrylic material is about half as expensive as the polycarbonate material the board decided to use in school windows last year, it is not as strong, according to Danta.

THE POLYCARBONATE material used last year was unbreakable, while the acrylic material breaks as easily as glass.

According to Danta, some polycarbonate material will continue to be used in

Vendor keeps school lunch program

Despite criticism of the school lunch program at Lincoln Junior High School, the Dist. 59 Board has decided to continue its lunch program at the school with the same food vendor.

Board member Edith Freund complained at Monday's school board meeting that on visiting the school during lunch last spring, she found the program inefficient and perhaps even unsanitary.

"That one lady cannot provide lunch for 300 kids," Mrs. Freund said. "I think that room should be enlarged and I think the food should be maintained so that we're not handling stale food." At present, the sandwiches provided in the machines at the school are delivered twice a week.

Rather than change the entire lunch program, the school board voted to continue its present lunch service with the addition of a class "A" type lunch (in-

Naming of schools no simple chore

by BOB GALLAS

Naming of schools in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is a lesson in local geography, history and philosophy, with a little confusion thrown in — like a junior Junior High or a school with eight possible names.

Luther Burbank, Robert Millikan, Eli Whitney, Alfred Whitehead, Jane Addams, and Waycinden were all suggested names for what was once Herzog School in Des Plaines when the school was to be renamed. After several weeks of suggestions, discussion and more suggestions, Dist. 59 board members finally settled on Albert Einstein, the great physicist.

Naming the first schools in Dist. 59 was no problem. The schools were named after the streets on which they were located, such as Brentwood School in Des Plaines, Dempster Junior High in Mount Prospect or Clearmont, Grove, and Ridge Schools in Elk Grove Village.

Schools were also named after the subdivisions or areas where they were located, such as Devonshire and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines.

Forest View School in Mount Prospect got its name from the school at the site of the Dist. 59 Administrative Center in Arlington Heights. When the old school was closed, public sentiment clamored for the new school in Mount Prospect to have the Forest View name.

SALT CREEK School in Elk Grove Village obviously got its name from Salt Creek, which runs through the village and comes within a few blocks of the school.

Things started becoming more complicated in naming schools about 10 years ago, when the Dist. 59 board adopted a policy of naming schools after individuals who made contributions to society.

The reasoning behind that thinking, according to past board meeting minutes, was that "naming the schools after individuals who have made contributions to our society could possibly inspire children to pattern their lives after those famous and successful people and . . . if only one child were so inspired, the efforts of the board would be rewarded."

Two schools in the district have been named after Centex Corp. officials. In fact, the oldest school in Dist. 59, built in 1957, was named after the founder of Centex, Ira Rupley.

Rupley, who died in 1960 at the age of 80, was instrumental in getting the land on which the school was built. He attended the formal dedication of the school in November of 1957. He was the only living person to have a Dist. 59 school named after him. Lively Junior High in Elk Grove Village was also named for a Centex official, Thomas Lively, who was president of Centex when he drowned in 1955 at the age of 45.

Grant Wood School was the first of a long line of schools to be named after persons who made significant contributions to society. Wood was an American painter who died in 1942.

He helped the development of regional art centers to encourage native art in America. Famous for his Midwestern scenes, his most famous painting was "American Gothic."

Dan Cook School in Elk Grove Village got its name from the man for whom Cook County is named. Cook, a frontier lawyer, was the first attorney general of Illinois and served in the U.S. Congress from 1819 to 1827.

ROBERT FROST School in Mount Prospect was originally called Elk Ridge Villa School. The name was changed to that of the famous American poet in 1964 when the trend toward schools named after people had just begun in the district.

Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village got its name from an American educator who died in 1887. A professor of moral philosophy, he became president of Williams College in 1836 and held that office until 1872. He was regarded as one of the greatest American educators of his time.

Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights was named after the founder of the Girl Scouts in America. She died in 1927 at the age of 67.

John Jay School in Mount Prospect was named after the famous American statesman who was a member of the first Continental Congress in 1774. Jay also served in Congress, as chief justice of New York state and as minister to Spain.

A famous American explorer, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, was chosen as the name for an Elk Grove Village school in 1967. Byrd, who discovered the South Pole and was the first man to fly over the North Pole in 1926, died in 1957.

Holmes Junior High in Mount Prospect seems to have the most mystery about its name. The correct name of the school is Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. Junior High. Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. was the famous Supreme Court Justice who served from 1902 to 1932.

Many people however, including the school's principal, Richard Jenness, thought the school was named after the famous jurist's son.

According to reference works, though, Holmes had no male children.

Jenness said some students attempted to learn about the school's namesake by going back over minutes of school board meetings and contacting people who were board members when the school was named in 1967. Their efforts, he said, were unsuccessful.

ONE THING is certain. If the school ever wants to change its name, there's no shortage of ideas. On file in the Dist. 59 Administrative Center is a list of persons whose achievements warrant schools being named after them. Included in the names are educators, manufacturers, journalists, doctors, statesmen and scholars. Included are two Elk Grove pioneers, Aaron Milner and Eli Skinner, who settled near Algonquin Road and Arlington Heights Road in the early 1800s.

The last school to be named in the district broke the string of famous names for schools. The school board, unable to agree on a name (some suggested Richard M. Nixon), called it Friendship.

The Des Plaines school is located near Friendship Park, which was named by a young girl in a contest to name the park.

Whatever the name, most will simply be called "school" by children in just a few weeks as classes begin for another year.

LIVELY JUNIOR HIGH School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village, is one of two Dist. 59 schools to be named after Centex Corp. officials. The other, Rupley School, 305 Oakton St. in Elk Grove Village, was named after Ira Rupley, who founded Centex.

Milk price hike predicted; may hit 20 cents per gallon

by MARCIA KRAMER

Three glasses of milk a day may become a little harder to swallow.

Milk industry spokesmen have predicted the price of milk may go up as much as a nickel a quart and 20 cents a gallon by the end of the year.

The projected boosts in milk costs is considerably higher than was predicted earlier. Just two weeks ago, industry spokesmen were anticipating a price hike of a nickel a gallon.

To a family of five which averages at least three gallons of milk a week, the increase would mean paying as much as 60 cents a week more to sustain their milk-drinking habits.

Robert Van Liere, regional manager of Associated Milk Producers Inc., Chicago, said yesterday consumers can expect milk prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents a quart, gallon containers to rise proportionately, or 12 to 20 cents, during the fall.

Van Liere predicted the cost of other dairy products, such as butter and cheese, also would go up slightly.

Except for the already tight availability of some cheeses, however, he said no shortage of dairy products is anticipated.

Van Liere attributes the higher cost of milk to several reasons. "The lack of people milking cows is the best reason," he says.

FARMERS ARE finding that it's cheaper to slaughter cows for beef production than to milk them.

As Van Liere put it: "Farmers just can't afford to put $3 worth of corn into a cow and get $2.80 back for the milk. They'd be far ahead to sell the cow and sell the corn too."

Many farmers have already taken that step. The Wisconsin cow population, for example, has declined by 20,000 over the past year.

Milk production decreased 7 per cent in July, compared to July, 1972.

Van Liere said he does not expect the price of milk to roll back once it goes up.

He and most industry spokesmen regard the cost increase as necessary to cover the rising costs of dairy farmers and milk processors.

"Milk is still one of the cheapest nutritional products in the country," he said.

For Trade Center site

Developer, village to share cost of interchange study

The Village of Arlington Heights and the developer of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center apparently will wind up sharing the cost of a traffic study.

The village board Monday night refused to spend $4,300 to pay the entire cost of a study that would have focused on the data needed to convince the Illinois Tollway Commission to complete the interchange at Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

On the other hand, the developer is required by village ordinance to supply a traffic study analyzing exit and entrance, as well as the internal circulation of the trade center.

The trustees voted to combine the two objectives into one study, with the developer and the village each paying a proportionate share of the cost.

A professional traffic study for a major development normally costs about $5,000.

VILLAGE PRES. Jack Walsh said the village should take advantage of the planned trade center development at the southeast corner of Arlington Heights Road and the Tollway.

The project could be additional leverage, he said, to get the Arlington Heights Road clover leaf completed.

The tollway commission owns the land necessary for a full interchange. Right now, however, traffic coming from the west cannot exit at Arlington Heights Road, nor can Arlington Heights Road traffic get onto the Tollway's west-bound lanes.

Previously, the village had considered paying the full cost of the traffic study in order to preserve the integrity and credibility of the report. But several trustees objected to the $4,300 cost and said they thought the expense should be shared by the developer.

The firm of Alstat & March, which submitted the original cost estimate, will be asked to break down the cost between work done for the development and other information gathered to prove the need for the interchange expansion.

Accident victim listed as 'good'

An Arlington Heights youth is in good condition with head injuries at Northwest Community Hospital after the car he was driving was involved in a head-on collision Monday night in Arlington Heights.

Police said Thomas Connery, 17, of 303 S. Gibbons, was the driver of a car that struck a car driven by Marion E. Donahue, of Mount Prospect, on Kensington Road near Wilshire Avenue.

Donahue and a passenger in the Connery car were treated and released from the hospital.

No charges have been filed yet, pending further investigation by the Arlington Heights police.

END OF THE SUMMER ROAD. A young boy rests a moment before resuming his journey. Autumn and school lie ahead, but there's still time for a spot on the side of the road and a chance to watch things go by. The vacation that once seemed endless slips by too fast. Sometimes it's best to stop the ride for a moment to watch and think.

Plan to expand village board going to state's top court

The lawyer challenging the expansion of the Arlington Heights Village Board has been granted a direct appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court.

John Clarke, an attorney in the office of State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, said yesterday the case probably would be heard by the state high court sometime in November.

The addition of two more trustees to the village board was upheld in February by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Robert J. Downing. Clarke then asked the state appeals court, which normally would hear the appeal to Judge Downing's ruling, to send the case directly to the supreme court.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS is the first village in Illinois to increase the number of trustees on its village board from six to eight. The expansion was made under the village's home rule powers after being approved in a referendum last Dec. 18.

Clarke's challenge has been called a "friendly lawsuit" because the court action was solicited by Village Atty Jack Siegel.

The lack of precedent for the board expansion made it necessary to have the constitutionality of the move upheld by the courts, Siegel told the board.

Otherwise it would be possible for someone to object to a specific board action on the basis that the increase had never been declared constitutionally sound.

Trustees Dave Griffin and Graeme George are currently filling the two new board seats. George was elected to a two-year term, while Griffin is serving a four-year term.

Arlington Hts., Palatine roads to get signals

Traffic signals at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Palatine roads should be installed by the end of the year, according to Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson.

Hanson said the state has agreed to pay for temporary traffic lights at the traffic-choked intersection. The cost is expected to be about $90,000.

The Village of Arlington Heights also has agreed to share the cost of signals at New Wilke and Algonquin, Kennicott and Rand, and White Oak and Arlington Heights Road if the state appropriates money for these controls in next year's budget.

The total cost of the village if the three intersections were signalized would be about $160,000, Hanson said.

But not all got away—from police

They deserved a break that day

Two youths were arrested Monday night after a melee in a Golf Road parking lot, which involved some 50 teenagers and several Des Plaines police officers, according to reports.

Only minor injuries were reported in the brief scuffle but police said the two arrested youths had to be forcibly subdued after one had allegedly struck Des Plaines Patrolman Wendell Whitted.

Charged with public intoxication and battery was Michael Vivado, 17, of 2418 Cedar Ln., Des Plaines. He was being held on $1,000 bond yesterday by police. The other youth, George Bayer, 19, 1229 Belmont, Arlington Heights, was charged with disorderly conduct. Bayer was later released on $25 bond.

The fracas began about 10:45 p.m. when Whitted and patrolman Jack Muhs tried to disperse a large group of youths who had congregated in a parking lot near the McDonald's Restaurant, 725 Golf Rd., according to Des Plaines police.

MUHS TOLD THE Herald yesterday the youths got into their cars and left but returned to the lot about 30 seconds later with an even larger group and began yelling obscenities at them.

The two officers radioed for help and according to reports, Vivado struck Whitted during a confrontation with the youths.

Police said no one involved in the incident required hospital treatment.

School budget hearing set tomorrow night

A public hearing for the 1973-74 School Dist. 25 budget will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Administration Building, 301 W. South St., Arlington Heights.

Persons who have comments or questions on the budget are invited to attend the hearing. The school board will vote to adopt the budget in regular meeting following the hearing.

The $11 million budget represents $700,000 more than last year's budget of $10.3 million, or an increase of approximately seven per cent.

The increase will be used for hiring personnel for new and continuing programs and improving student services, said District Supt. Donald V. Strong.

Taxpayers can expect a tax rate ranging between $2.82 and $2.89 per $100 assessment, according to Strong.

Police coming from 'all over' to honor fallen comrade

by STIRLING MORITA

Local policemen are expected to join in an anticipated 100-squad-car, funeral procession tomorrow for Hillside policeman Anthony Raymond.

The body of Raymond, who was abducted and consequently the subject of a massive search last winter, was found Saturday buried in a shallow grave near Rhinelander, Wis. An autopsy report shows Raymond died from four stab wounds in the back, authorities said.

Messages inviting various police departments to attend the funeral cortege were dispatched over the Leads teletype system. DuBeau said squad cars would be in attendance from across the state.

THE ELK GROVE Police Department is planning to send a manned motorcycle and a squad car with two lieutenants. The Mount Prospect Police Department will send one squad car.

Both the Hoffman Estates and the Schaumburg police departments will send one squad car each if no manpower problems arise Thursday morning.

"We'll probably send a squad car down even if I have to drive it," Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said. "It shows support for local police."

One policeman will represent the Arlington Heights Police Department, two men will go from Palatine, and two Cook County Sheriff's police squad cars will be present. Eight Buffalo Grove policemen, about a third of the department, will attend in two squad cars. Wheeling is sending two policemen and one squad car.

DuBEAU SAID IT was a matter of police routine to invite area police departments to attend funerals of police officers slain while on duty.

"Also, many of these people had cooperated in reference to the investigation," DuBeau said.

The squad cars will meet at the Hursen Funeral Home at the intersection of Mannheim and Roosevelt roads in Hillside about 12:15 p.m. Burial will be at the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, Hillside.

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and Cook County Sheriff's investigators are continuing their investigation into the abduction and slaying of Raymond, Deputy Chief Richard Quagliano of the Sheriff's department said.

SUSPECTED IN the incident is Silas C. Fletcher, 38, of 6899 Orchard Ln., Hanover Park, who is being held in an Indiana jail, authorities said.

In addition to Fletcher, Jesse C. Millard, 28, of 344 Washington St., Hoffman Estates, was under investigation in connection with the incident until he was killed during a holdup of a Winchester, Ind., coin shop. Millard was shot by the coin dealer's wife.

Fletcher was arrested after the attempted holdup July 25, and charged with committing a crime while armed and inflicting personal injury during a robbery. He was being held in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 in the Randolph County Jail.

Authorities were still searching for a third man involved in the attempted robbery. Informants linked the three with the kidnapping. The third suspect has not been named.

RAYMOND'S BODY WAS found in a shallow grave in a wooded area adjacent to a farm owned by Fletcher's sister, Mary Ann Eaman.

Raymond was abducted while making a traffic stop on an entrance ramp to the Eisenhower Expressway. Police have theorized that Raymond may have stopped three men who had just robbed a Hillside restaurant.

A massive search near Coal City, Ill., was conducted after witnesses told police they had seen a man wandering in the area. After the search failed to turn up Raymond, the overall hunt lost impetus.

New well to cost village $118,748.50

Arlington Heights Well No. 15 will be drilled near Brook Drive between Algonquin Road and the Northwest Tollway at a cost of $118,748.50.

The Arlington Heights Village Board has approved a bid from Wheeling Well Works for the well which could be on line by June 1, 1974.

The well, located in the Clearbrook Industrial Park, will be drilled by a rotary method which costs about $2,000 more than cable tool drilling.

However, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the rotary method likely will result in savings in the cost of developing the new well which can run as high as $43,000.

Well 15, at the extreme southern end of the village, has been planned for some time. The new well will also help supply the proposed Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center at Arlington Heights Road and the Tollway.

Gas station rezoning trial set Sept. 10

A Sept. 10 trial date has been set in Cook County Circuit Court on a rezoning suit seeking to establish a gas station and car wash at the southwest corner of Palatine and Rand Roads.

Cook County last December rejected a petition to rezone the 1.2 acre unincorporated site. Subsequent to that decision attorneys for the Shell Oil Co., prospective operator of the car wash and gas station, filed suit against the county's ruling.

The Village of Arlington Heights had submitted a formal objection to the rezoning at the time of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals hearings.

Maryville site under parents' attack

by MARY HOULIHAN
A News Analyst

"What's best for the children?" All at River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education meetings, a sign with this message is placed in a position of prominence.

Board Pres. Lloyd Demel started bringing the sign to the board meetings several months ago when he was struck with the importance of the message. "What's best for the children is really the thing behind it all," Demel said. "It just struck me that the need for that constant reminder was truly appropriate."

In the last two weeks, Dist. 26 has become enveloped in a controversy that seems to have confused the question of what's best for the children with the question of what's best for whose children.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on the proposed site for a new school for children from Maryville Academy in Des Plaines.

On Aug. 7, the school board voted to place the new school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the same site as the River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd.

At the time, acting Supt. James Retzlaff defended the vote, saying that one of the prime considerations in choosing the River Trails site was to aid in "mainstreaming" — helping Maryville students adjust into the regular public school system by building their self-images and their confidence.

Despite the defense, however, parents protested the board's decision vehemently. "If you sit there and try to believe that those children are going to be just like our children, you're wrong," said Ross Blake, athletics coach at Maine West High School who has taught Maryville children. "They're different from our children and they know they're different. Stealing is a way of life to them." Blake also has children in Dist. 26 schools.

Indeed, many parents are under the impression that children who attend the River Road School at Maryville are extremely different — almost a species apart from children who attend the regular Dist. 26 schools.

THE STUDENTS are not different, according to the Rev. John Smyth, director of Maryville Academy. As for the criminal aspect, "facts in the police stations point out that stealing is not a way of life for them," said Father Smyth. There's only a "small percentage" involved in trouble at all, he said. "I think people are very quick to generalize or label."

The only difference in the students, if there is one, said Retzlaff, is a difference because of the children's backgrounds.

"Maryville is a haven for kids no one wants," Retzlaff explained. The children are sent to Maryville from the juvenile courts and the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services either because they are from broken homes or have had some kind of school problem. Forty-five per cent are members of minority groups.

"He doesn't have a parent to take care of him or he can't be placed in a foster home, so you have to assume all of them are going to have some type of problem," said Retzlaff of the Maryville child.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL specifications for the new school facility for the Maryville students, the River Road teachers have categorized the children according to the types of problems they have.

The first category includes children who are from culturally deprived backgrounds. According to the teachers' descriptions, "this student is characterized by low performance on verbal skills. He usually has a poor attitude toward learning and suffers from a feeling of low self-esteem." The child may be "street-smart" the teachers say, but confused by the demands of the classroom.

The emotionally disturbed youngster is one who indicates some type of serious nervous disorder, displaying temper tantrums, hallucinations or withdrawal, teachers said. This child finds it hard to concentrate on tasks for a long period.

In contrast to the emotionally disturbed youngster, the socially maladjusted child reacts quite differently. This student cannot adapt to normal social situations such as the classroom, but he indicates this lack of adaptability in some form of fighting or bickering, rather than in withdrawal.

Another problem child is the slow learner. This student is just what the label implies. He or she is someone who has a low performance in non-verbal types of skills. Though he is a persistent student, he finds that he does not retain things long after they are presented to him.

Learning disabilities also account for problems for students at Maryville. A child with a learning disability could have difficulty with poor eye-hand coordination, perceptual disabilities, or may be easily distracted.

The mentally-retarded youngster is one who actually is retarded, as opposed to the students who may be operating at the retarded level but have the ability to learn with the proper educational opportunity.

TRAINING THE students receive at the River Road School is "basically all remedial" according to Joe Wawak, principal of the school. In the continuous education plan at River Road, rigid grade lines have been removed so a student can progress at his own individual rate of learning. The child moves from level to level according to his own social, emotional and academic achievement.

According to Wawak, the children at the River Road School have three important needs. "Academically, they need remedial help in reading and math. Socially, they need help in learning how to get along with others and physically, they need help with motor coordination," Wawak said.

"A lot of them have to learn that they are here to learn things and to face responsibilities. We expect, even though they are disadvantaged, the same from them as we would any kids."

Wawak said he doesn't foresee "that many problems" in placing the new special education facility for the Maryville students on the site of the present junior high school. We will have our own schedules. I think we probably have similar problems as the other district schools have. There are going to be kids who act out because of a problem, but this is only maybe 3 per cent," said Wawak.

WHEN THE JUNIOR HIGH school site was first discussed, Father Smyth said he felt the alternative site, the property north of Maryville Academy owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago, would be a better site. The Archdiocese property would have cost the school district a minimum of $130,000 as opposed to a zero cost for the junior high property. Smyth said he felt the site would be able to maintain better control of the students at the Maryville site.

Since the school board meeting in which the vote on the junior high site was taken, however, Father Smyth has changed his opinion. He said the main reason he wanted the school on the Maryville site was because he was under the impression that other Dist. 26 children would be attending the school. However, according to Retzlaff, there are no plans to have district school children attend the new special education school.

I would almost insist that it not be on our grounds now," said Father Smyth. That's our whole philosophy, to get Maryville involved in the community. I think it's much healthier for the children and for the community."

AS FOR PARENTS' worries that students from the special education facility will have problems in being on the same campus with students from the junior high school, Father Smyth foresees no great difficulties. They're mixing now (in the regular district schools)," he said, so they're really worrying about nothing. I personally can't see any real problems outside of the two I would mention of transportation and communication — that is, that Maryville would be physically closer."

Retzlaff agrees with Smyth in his assessment of potential problems at the junior high school site. I feel up until recently, there's been a very healthy, positive acceptance of our educating the Maryville students in the district," Retzlaff said.
